DRAMATIC COLLECTION DISPLAYED BY LIBRARY

Theatrical Posters, Presented by H. H. Furness, Will Be Exhibited for Next Two Weeks

TWO FIRST FOLIOS INCLUDED

Theatrical and dramatic material, consisting mainly of theatrical posters from the collection of the late Horace Howard Furness, Spanish plays of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, folk and sports editions of the old English dramatics, and material illustrating the history of the American drama, have been displayed in the University of Pennsylvania library. The posters have been brought together for the first time in a exhibition for the next two weeks in the course of joining the main reading room. The collection as a whole forms an interesting commentary on the drama of the various periods.

The collection of theatrical posters was presented to the library in order to illustrate the attractions of the time, by the late Horace Howard Furness, in the late nineties, also was then chairman of the Trustees' literary committee. The whereabouts of the collection was not known since 1901, a quarter of a century ago, when the University library was reclassified. The collection has just been rediscovered in a storage room of the basement of the library, where the cats had played havoc with them. The most perfect examples, however, ranges from glinting advertisement sheets for the newspaper to the most ornate of the modern announcements of the more serious drama, such as "The Rivals," by R. B. Sheridan, were made-presentable and placed on display.

Another case contains selection from the library's exceptionally rich collection of French and Spanish plays, of which the library possesses approximately twelve thousand. The cataloging department is still at work cataloging the French plays, which number five thousand volume. Favorites of a First Folio Shakespeare and a First Edition of Thome and Adams, and original lithography and fine line engravings of old English dramatic, are among the examples of the English dramas displayed in another of the cases. Accompanying the editions are copies of the early history of the English drama.

In the right section of the center case are books, prints, plates and engravings concerned with early American drama, and especially with the Philadelphia stage, while a mass of material recently received at attention from the library of William Winter, a noted dramatic critic of his day, is exhibited in the center case. The case on the left contains various issues of literary interest, notable among which is a selection from the James Buck Collection of Prompt Books, presented to the library by the late Samuel Buckman.

RESTRICTED ENROLLMENT

Word that an effort will be made under the new plan of limited enrollment to re-establish personal relations between faculty and students and to get away from the present too desire of universities to become plants that manufacture education, is being received with universal favor by Pennsylvania undergraduates and alumni. Dr. Pennsylvania, in an ad before the General Alumni Luncheon on Monday night, cornered the present situation when he said: "The modern system lacking the personal touch and merely repeating a manufacturing process by which our young men and women pass into their universities and out without any personal relations and without receiving the great benefits derived from association with trained and learned educators."

It has been plainly apparent during the past five years that the size of the student body seriously taxes the capacity of the University. Not infrequently it is necessary to assign so many students to one class that the instructor does not even get to know them all by name, and individual attention is consequently absent.

Certainly it is unfair that the men who are eager to take the best that the University can impart should be hindered in their ambition by being placed in unfeeling classes, many of the members of which are far less sincere than they in their desire to obtain an education. It is the duty of the University to accommodate as many students as possible, but it is only fair that in selecting the applicants who are to be admitted, preference be given to worthiest and need. For there are a great many without any personal relations and without receiving the great benefits derived from association with trained and learned educators.

The Board of Trustees and faculty have seen the necessity for re-establishing personal relations between the teacher and the taught. In the words of Dr. Pennsylvania, "Men come to the University culture, immature and plastic. It is the duty of the University to mold and develop these men, and we are resolved to conduct in such manner that we can do our best work and do it in the best way."

FREE LECTURES FOR THE PUBLIC

With the announcement of the plans for the utilization of the gift of $300,000 by the children of former President C. C.
Harrison is revealed a new project which the University will include in the scope of its work.

The Board of Managers of the University Museum have decided to conduct a series of free lectures, beginning next fall, which will be offered free of charge to the public. This conforms with the stipulations of the founder in setting aside the fund for the University.

As far as can be determined, this is the first perpetual gift ever made to Pennsylvania for the extension of education to the general public. With a fund of this kind the Museum authorities hope to attract some of the best speakers in the country, and as a result of presenting nationally known lecturers, they hope to attract large and intelligent audiences.

Although this is a new undertaking and a departure from the usual activities of the University, it is still in keeping with the policy of Pennsylvania to lend aid to the advanc-ment of business and society. With the advent of these lectures a broad field is opened up, which may lead to a more
