University Recognizes Need for Greater Coordination in Attracting Students

That the University has recognized the growing need for a greater coordination in its attempt to interest the better type of student was stated recently in an address by Theodore J. Grayson, Director of the Evening School, "The Committee on Preparatory Schools," he said, "is doing every effort, through its Secretary, Mr. Edward W. Maltz, to have at least one representative from each state in the metropolitan area fully and adequately informed of the work of this committee."

The first few weeks are six weeks of reaching the schools, namely, the boys and girls studying through their various clubs, the alumni through the School Committee of the General Alumni Society, the Trustees through the underwriting of Honorary be-given upon David Masters of private schools, the School of Education through the teachers, and the Collegiate through the work of the College. And, lastly, the Graduate School through the various courses of study offered by masters and teachers of local secondary schools.

These dialects prove markedly inadicate because there was no coordination of the efforts of the University. Fund instituted a thorough investigation and investigation of the dire-mion of Mr. Curtis F. Morgan also appeared to be in order of considering all the above-mentioned methods of communicating with the thousands of a general class.

WE ON OUR SHOULDER

As one goes upon his daily rounds about the campus, he hears fellow students complaining about various existing conditions. Many of these complaints are not without ground and many of the casual suggestions for bettornent have certain practical value. Unfortunately, both are usually swept under the rug by Other fellow students. We have gone to the students, the proper authorities. THE PENNSYLVANIAN is interested in the recommendations that are given, for it is the principal reason why the complaints are not recorded not the slow progress made upon them.

Many men fail to realize that there is open to them an entirely new and effective way of bringing any complaint or grievances in the attention of the proper authorities. THE PENNSYLVANIAN invites communications upon any subject, in general interest to the undergraduates, and although they need not be anonymous, the editor will be willing upon request. The Pennsylvania editors are only too glad to receive communications that might make for improvement. It has always been the policy of THE PENNSYLVANIAN to investigate without partiality or prejudice any matter in which the welfare of the University is involved. Recent follow-up articles, published to explain what steps have been taken to improve certain conditions commented on in earlier columns, furnish proof that our efforts are sometimes fruitful.

It is only natural that young men thrown together should seem to detect certain evils and who should publish places where there is need for improvement, for that is not apparent to the editors of THE PENNSYLVANIAN. We would like to hear of them and bear any suggestions that our readers may have for effecting improvement generally whether it be in the undergraduate or around the campus, or as the columns of this paper. We seek your cooperation in our effort to promote the welfare of the University.

EDUCATION AS AN ALUMNI BOND

The announcement that the University will extend its service to alumni to include important educational features has been an extensive one. A glance at the progress of the University may have the full benefits of discoveries and developments in those particular fields and of their own. To accomplish this end, the University plans to employ many different channels providing a variety of forms in which the alumnus may have for effecting improvement generally whether it be in the undergraduate or around the campus.

It has been said that, although a University training may be the diploma授予, but the University training and yet, it would seem that it might have a future place in the chosen field after graduation. No broad-minded person will dispute the value of University training, and yet, it would seem that it might have a future place in the chosen field after graduation. The atmosphere of the University should provide the value of University training, and yet, it would seem that it might have a future place in the chosen field after graduation.

One of the most effective measures in the promotion of this plan is that the student himself will be encouraged to take part in the educational service. The plan of the University is to employ its students in the educational service. The plan of the University is to employ its students in the educational service. The plan of the University is to employ its students in the educational service.

Although the idea of a plan for effecting improvement, that is not apparent to the editors of THE PENNSYLVANIAN, we would like to hear of them and bear any suggestions that our readers may have for effecting improvement generally whether it be in the undergraduate or around the campus, or as the columns of this paper. We seek your cooperation in our effort to promote the welfare of the University.
