I would like to read the dinner in body. Several houses, the of Pennsylvania's precious athletic traditions.

Annual affair, will the fraternities attend Varsity dinner should its athletes letter societies Creek. "U. V. H.," its members pay for their meals by the members.

Consequently, many of them will dine rather than we will. Consequently, many of them will close this in their own house rather than to sustain the expense and in-

Not that the prices for seats have been raised to four and five dollars, our little dream collection has figured and that at least three times in the fall will attend the next football games.

The Penn Cup says he can't understand why there should have been so much discussion over the Departmental elections. There are only Lit Brothers, Sterdtigbe and Cheiff, Gilmor's, Schlossberg's and Womertime's to consider. (Ad.)

But it is an interesting fact that the fraternities group is the one which is least likely to be well represented at the dinner on Thursday. Practically all of the chaptersvaulted their own tables, and members pay for their meals by the week. Consequently, many of them will close this in their own house rather than to sustain the expense and in the convention of taking dinner elsewhere.

The only way in which this difficulty can be overcome is for each fraternity to take official action on the matter before next Thursday, with a view to closing their tables for one meal and attending the dinner in body. Several houses, recognizing this as an opportunity to honor their own athletes, have already taken this action and assured a complete turnout.

This kind of cooperation is what may be expected of the fraternities. They will not wish official recognition of this situation. Individual members will gladly support the movement, provided the organizations themselves take some uniform action.

The way is clear. Let us help to nurture this young and growing tradition—the awakening of the "D."
LONGLEY STRESSES COLLEGE TRAINING

The Professor Says College is Essential for Good Philosophy of Life

In a recent address to Yale undergraduates, Prof. C. E. Longley, the Mathematically Important, recently made a certain phrase: "The Philosophy of Life." In his talk he stressed the need for undergraduates to realize the importance of these principles.

Professor Longley began his lecture by pointing out the difficulty of attempting to deal with his subject in such a limited period and added that it was his idea to connect it with college life. The definition of a philosopher is one who seeks ever-challenging of life and more towards the onward movement of things. "The Philosophy of Life" is the thing which determines man's thoughts and actions. Professor Longley thinks that within these two definitions lies the fundamental point of the whole matter.

"We do not all have a philosophy of life as we should in the story of Lincoln, nor do we have any general principles to guide our lives," he said.

As we mature, Professor Longley pointed out, we are bound to develop some training that guides our actions, which is subject to our environment and the associations that we make.

It is the object of schools and colleges not merely to educate youth in the facts of certain conditions, but to develop men with a good moral fiber and a sense of responsibility. Every college and university hopes that its alumni will be a credit to its connection, and since all this depends on the philosophy of life—the object of the university should be to give to men with correct ideals.

Tickets Registered for Varsity "P" Dinner

The committee is planning the same policy this year.

As a means of selling more tickets for the dinner, the ticket committee has decided to adopt a new plan of distribution and will place a number of tickets in possession of each fraternity today. All the tickets in the hands of the various ticket committee members have been registered. The fraternity will be asked to dispose of the tickets at meeting tonight and make returns tomorrow. Thus for the sake we have preserved shipshape.
