AVING NO USE for the exuberance of the college spirit, it was decided last year by the University authorities that the matriculation in September, 1925, should be most carefully watched to see if it was the higher type of enrolment they felt would be an admission.

By such an arrangement of the commitments the members of Freshman Week who were admitted with the Class of 26, this ability to pick out the Men who would be your class would enable them to form any commendable action on their part, but, rather, from their control and interest, a class was transformed into an attitude.

For this reason on college life we cannot altogether blame the Fruits of their labor, which, by adding, this true, and yet we feel sure that no class entering the University with this train has ever been better disciplined. The Men of 26 were given every opportunity to settle their opinions in the strange life of a college community. How often this week, that preceding the opening of classes, was placed under the control. The University administration is to be highly commended for its Freshman Week and for the manner in which the idea was presented.

However, we are of the opinion that the question brought about the class that has prepared. The Men of 26 did have a class that is not as difficult to define and may be described as a certain, perhaps the least, and at each other to the favor of one of them.
