SEEDED NET PLAYERS ADVANCE IN TOURNAMENT

In spite of the inclement weather during the middle of last week, Friday and Saturday, on the knot the River Field tennis court again filled with players who have arrived in the annual tournament. Most of them, together with several new men have arrived regularly during the whole week.

The three opponents who were the first, second, and third, at last, the hard rain, and forth, respectively, have all arrived during the week, and the boys are working hard without difficulty. Henderson who was not among the seeded players has also reached the semifinals. In the Freidson tournament, Arnold King was the No. 1 player in the first round, Simmons has reached the semifinals, with his loss to the third seed.

MUSEUM SPONSORS TWO
EASTERN EXPEDITIONS

Excavation Work in Mesopotamia Under William W. K. C. Naylor Engaged in Uncovering Ancient Archeology

Lecture Schedule Announced

Each year the University sponsors a series of archeological excavations. As in past years, it will sponsor expeditions to different parts of the world in order
to carry on excavations.

At the present time there are two such expeditions which have been formed.
The first is one which is now competing with International students in London before its departure for the season of the archaic city Fr. This is the third expedition in this field that the museum has sponsored. All of the work has been in collaboration with the British Museum of London.

The other expedition is one which the museum conducts on its own initiatives.
This one is carrying on its work in Muse-
opoliis, in the ancient Bosphorus monument in the Bank of Greece. The first rep-port, though meager, states that three hundred skilled workmen are now digging
in the site of ancient Athens.

Along with the rest of the program, the museum at the University for many years has been interested in discovering ancient
works of art and the secrets of the ancients.
Following is the list of the excavations:

CLASSICS CLUB TO PRESENT PLAY

Philadelphia Classical Society Will View
Premiere Performance

Members of the Classic Club of the University have been engaged in a study of the literature of ancient Greece. The play which will be presented is by Sophocles,
"Antigone." It will be presented in English.

The Classic Club is composed of two women students and thirty members of the department of classics and classics,
beneath the direction of Prof. Haldane.
It is a student body who have taken the same courses as those prescribed in the regular classics courses. The play will be presented in English.

40TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE PENNSYLVANIAN
HUGO R. BRYK BRINGING 2500 PLAYS TO STATES

WHOLE COLLECTION FOR SALE

A dramatic deluge is scheduled to inundate the American stage and screen. Hugo Bryk, head of the German Author Society, will have Berlin for New York in a few days to dispose of the biggest collection of plays ever assembled by an individual in theatrical history. This baggage will contain no less than 2500 manuscripts, each a drama, melodrama, farce, comedy, farce or opera, many by well-known European authors.

The author has decided to part with the entire mass of theatrical material on the Broadway market, and include movie as well as the most ambitious in literary purchase the lot. Whether a purchaser already has been found Mr. Bryk declines to say. It is rumored that Two Billionnaires, New York producer and theatre operator, has been negotiating with Mr. Bryk through William Blair, his brother, who is in Berlin. "The production potential contained in these 2500 pieces, fifty per cent of which have been preserved in Europe, many with great success, will very well be imagined," Mr. Bryk said. "They will be sold as a unit and the buyer can do whatever he likes with the lot whole." Many of the authors who have contributed to this dramatic output are: Julius Wilhelm, whose Louis XIVth is being filmed by Famous Players Corporation; Franz Arnold and Ernst Buhk, authors of "The Whole Town is Talking," and Herman Ruhl. There are millions also of German musical comedies, adapted for pictures as well as the stage. The writer Mr. Bryk places on his collection is unknown.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT HEAD ADVISES GROUP DISCUSSIONS

"You have not lived unless you have set up the whole night talking," reads the opining of Dr. Felix E. Schelling, head of the Department of English at the University who admits he has spent many a night in such occupation. "Once I was a young instructor," he said, "I had a class of students who read in my home at night and we would sit all night discussing every subject under the sun. Dr. Proctor, who was then a lad, was in the class with me. Dr. Schelling pointed out that European students are more interested in their studies because they spend more time in actually life speculation. Europeans are considered to be more practical, they say. Before we take pride in being specialists, conversation brings college men in our way with each other and I believe that these conversations constitute valuable work."

In order to keep a weekend engagement, we are writing this before the bonfire-taking spectacle which was presented to the campus last Saturday. At this writing the players have not yet started out on the field, so we will be waiting late for a game. In case of victory, you will find the outlines of the pinnacles of the conciliation in case of defeat (thanks!) use the words with which you will be satisfied.

We are happy (and)

We won chiefly a lot of money (appar. same; we didn't)

Thus offered.

When the Autumn sun is climbing the Campus in golden light, your Topcoat is smart—hardwearing—light hearted friend.

And when gray clouds roll over head, and the dismal rain starts down, your Topcoat wraps you dry and warm—a true friend—a friend indeed.

We have assembled an unusual line of the smartest costs for the Pennsylvania man to select from. Let's be friends—your needs and the Campus Shop. Stop in today and inspect our distinctive showing.
