FINAL SPOTTING BY ROBERTS

Making the circuit of the campus, the Presidential Squad drilled in the shooting and dining techniques. The team, which will be drilled in this way, will consist of five men, who will be selected from among the members of the Class of 1926.
Well, the school year's activities are getting under way. Juniors and the freshmen are beginning to function.

Juniors, we observe, has elected three new members to its board. Immediately following this important action, the board was carried to the printer to print three additional copies of the next issue, bringing the total up to four.

Princeton is starting a football league—whatever that is. The kids seem to have abandoned croquet for some reason.

News Item: Good old Zeus and the good old Undergraduate Council will hold a joint meeting somewhere along the Camden waterfront tomorrow evening if the means allow. The Editors of the "Bennett Monocle" in the only invited guest.

Such games as Follow-the-Leader, Count-the-Votes, and Die-You-M ein the Spirits will be played, to the tune of portable orthopedics.

One of our freshman chemists has refused to buy any more salt until the line really comes.

Man-a-moon (3rd degree):

Action in the Hall-Meal has been brought to a halt because they can't find twenty men who haven't seen or assisted in the murder.

"Wilson Runs Well."—Headline.

"Bubbles, sign the gentlemen up.

The Freshman across the hall refuses to take foiling for granted because he believes it is wrong to deal in stolen needs.

After all, foiling seems to consist of nothing more than yelling one's opposition.

We are of the opinion that the dear old Council is amassing things a bit when they say that the Freshman election only will be a temporary one.

They must be working on the principle that a politician is guilty until he can prove himself innocent.

"Six of Eight States Wet in Liquor Polls."—Headline. What has the Missouri government changed again?

Propaganda Rhymes for Cliff Owers, et al.Have Rim’s Contrast, have you any pull?

You said it, brother, the ballot box is full; one from a Sophomore.

Three from a Sophomore.

And this is the climax; we'll be on top.

"L'Eveil" Baloney! read the three lines.

(Old King Cole had a great coat.

That grew on the end of his nose.

He had it cut.

So fine clothes wouldn’t work.

But he fought back at his clothes.)

SPRING: (All wait) Twinkle, twinkie, little loaf-end.

What are you doing? It hasn’t failed for three weeks, and by old man’s standard perhaps.

Finally we observed the following sign in front of a New York City street:

FLETHER FIXED

CRANK CASE SERVICE

Cliff Blevins, don’t you hear?

Says they know the plot of "The Quakerstown." Consists of Brickwinds trying to get the operator to return his money after a flim-flam endeavor to telephone his parents.

We attach to signature the fact that the Bennett News makes its appearance this week on the day of the Junior elections.

SIDELINES ON FOOTLIGHTS

Sweet and successful as has been the special offering to Philadelphia on Monday evening recently. "Vivica's Wife" can say that it was the best that this author had produced is mildly stating the situation. His first play, "The Torch Bearers," was a satirical song on the Little Theatre movement, full of spirit but a bit unfitted in technique; the second, "The Show-off," gave evidence of greatly increased ability and communicative group of stage situations. And now Mr. Halls reaches the heights with his beloved endeavor and attains them easily.

The entire plot of the play is concerned with the lives of a husband and wife, the former used to companionship and a wide circle of friends: the latter priding herself on only the material things, and taking a home for its mere comfort. To Mrs. Craig, marriage meant not a home, but a house. She makes no attempt to directly dominate her spouse, for she has safely accomplished through her means of her own protection. In the end, the house leaves, as do the other occupants of the place, and the lady of the house is involved in a large scandal; Mrs. Craig, however, is left only the material things, an impression which she herself has created. To have the peace end in any other fashion has been a direct result of the effect, but the wise author handles this in his usual finished style.
