The success or failure of an individual fraternity is in the hands of the freshmen for it is a matter of training. The high standards established by the PXR for the purpose of setting or surpassing can only be met by the freshmen who are trained to uphold her ideals and serve her loyally.

At the onset the observation which a fraternity must make of a freshman is sometimes unfair to the first-year men. Often he sees the coming in a trying situation—his increased importance, the suddenness of it, and in many other situations over which the freshman has no control. Under circumstances the freshman might not make hard judgments. Realize that the freshmen have not had the time to perfect the standards that you have been able to observe. They are still strangers to the college, and should be treated with sympathy and patience. Furthermore, some men are more adaptable than others and it is unfair to attempt to judge the entire group of men who appear uninitiated. Do not hold this against him; it may be that the man who is slow in blossoming forth will be the long run, he is the stronger and better in the end. If you make more effort on the part of the fraternity to decide him, but the longest time will give your dividends.

A type of freshman is the one who has already worked during the first term only to make an impression upon the freshmen men. He may not always have been so ready to work; in some cases he who shows his experience and quietly does his work in the background can be most effective. In short, we do not believe that the former sort will ever stand in anything. The man who plays the part of the one who has everything and yet who works quietly is always known that his real lack lies in experience.

This fraternity man undoubtedly has a harder task than the freshman when it comes to running for the presidency as he has the bee of all and at the same time he must constantly be watching the motives of the man beside him. It is the responsibility of the man who is responsible for the fraternity, he must make the freshmen feel that he has a leader and when he selects a fraternity officer. Also first-year man can concentrate more readily on the problem that confronts the fraternity man who must learn new faces every day. For these reasons, he behaves better the latter to take himself and see that he is prepared for the task at hand.

Pennsylvania needs in her fraternity chapters men who will uphold their ideals and serve her loyally.

Congratulations to the Pennsylvania American articles which placed last plays for the freshman Memorial Find Dinner. To the experienced by-pantry men who so faithfully helped in the consumption of these efforts and to the members who bore the responsibility for the individual subscriptions which enabled the campaign to be successful. hearty congratulations. Not one of the men and women engaged in this work were to receive the slightest of rewards for the trouble which they take in order is put the Class of 1936's final appearance and to all that labored hard and faithfully.

As a result of the efforts of these individuals who were engaged in the work, making colorful folders for Pennsylvania's memorial in their name of which they gave their knowledge of themselves, the draw was strongly exerted to the amount of several thousand dollars. Not only the knowledge of this matter, but the knowledge of the matters which were past and the knowledge of the students who desire a great deal of the honor attendant upon the American Society of Pennsylvania. This is the Class of 1936.

At a short time, we hope work upon the building of the new house has been accomplished. This building structure is completed the members of the undergraduate body will not only have the knowledge that that type of organization is a true in a striking home, but it will also be able to present with the Pennsylvania House, which was made possible through the efforts of Pennsylvania's members.

JANUARY 16
The Junior Banquet
For one death in the first term, the members of the Class of 1936 were hailed as kings of the campus. And so withfulfilled, and the Class of 1936 withstood the pressure of the Junior Banquet. Next term, the Class of 1936 withstood the pressure of the Junior Banquet. And so withfulfilled, and the Class of 1936 withstood the pressure of the Junior Banquet.

With the passing of that memorable Junior Banquet, which was a great success, the Class of 1936 set aside the pressure of the Junior Banquet. And so withfulfilled, and the Class of 1936 withstood the pressure of the Junior Banquet.

On Thursday night, the first time since the class of 1936, an opportunity will be presented for the final "kings of the campus" to meet as a class. At this time, that worthy organization is taking time in which to complete the necessary arrangements for the Junior Banquet.

Judging by the progress, or rather lack of progress of the ticket sale to date, many members of the Class of 1936 might have not awakened their opportunity. With an attractive program arranged, the committee has done every thing to finance the affair. All that remains is for the Juniors to do their part, and help make the banquet a success.

The Junior Banquet is a time in charge of arrangements of a representative fraternity.
