Was First English University to Admit Students. Disbanding Bars Of Sex, Race, or Creed

IDEA INFLUENCED OTHERS

Next June the University College, formally known as the University of London, will celebrate the one-hundredth anniversary of its foundation. The foundation stone of its first building was laid by the Duke of Saxe on April 20, 1827.

University College is remarkable in a number of respects, being the first University in England to open its doors to all, without distinction of class, race, or creed. This was the first University in England to admit women students on the same terms with the men. All the newer Universities of England have been founded on principles which were directly inspired by this University.

Among the founders are included such worthies as the poet, Thomas Campbell and Farquhar Maclaurin, father of the literature. The philosopher, Jeremy Bentham was also one of its founders, and his eleemosyne, wearing the same clothes which he wore in life, is exhibited in a large glass case at the University.

The University College is in commencing on the non-existence of sex in education.

In their present classes of 1927, men and women work much harder than the one today, but they take a larger part in the men's individual education, which affects all, in some points of view.

INVITE DESCENDANT OF CONFUCIUS TO UNIVERSITY

A descendant of Confucius, Jin Kung, six-year-old descendant of the great Confucius of China, visited a hotel from Shanghai, China. He is to attend the University of Pennsylvania when he is ready for college. The hotel, where he is staying, is called Confucius Hotel. He will be taught by the famous head of the Confucius family, which has been in this hotel for over sixty-five centuries, the oldest hotel of the most revered of all Chinese philosophers. Jin Kung arrived at the hotel through his step-mother, his parents being unable to come for his trip to the United States.

However, the Temple of Confucius in Shanghai, the boy's home, is very protected and impressive. From Johnson arrived at the temple and described it as being very clean and magnificent. The present head of Confucianism in which the ancestors train themselves for the elaborate ceremonies of the holiday and anniversaries.

PRINCIPAL REASONS FOR DISMISSAL
According to the Princetonian, the most common reason for dismissal is that the student is not making enough progress to continue. This is followed by academic difficulties and personal problems.

Walter Cunningham, an English teacher at a local high school, said that he often sees students who are having trouble with their studies. He said that he tries to help them as much as possible, but sometimes it is just not enough.

WHY IS A CHEERLEADER?

Why is a cheerleader? It may seem obvious, but it is often overlooked.

A cheerleader is a worker. They work to bring enthusiasm and excitement to the athletes and fans. They are the faces of the school, representing the school in a positive light.

A cheerleader is a team player. They work together with other team members to create a cohesive and supportive environment.

A cheerleader is a performer. They use their skills and talent to entertain and inspire the audience.

A cheerleader is a leader. They lead by example, setting a standard for others to follow.

A cheerleader is a student. They balance their academic responsibilities with their cheerleading duties.

A cheerleader is a role model. They influence the lives of others, both on and off the field.

In short, a cheerleader is a valuable asset to any team and school. They bring joy, excitement, and positivity to every event they attend.

France and British Isles Average Lower Percentage of University Men Than United States

In the United States there are some outstanding statistics regarding the number of names appearing in the United States and in foreign countries. In France, for instance, the number of students in the population over the institutions of higher learning, while in the British Isles only 10% of the students in universities. In one our country there were, during 1933, about 250,000 students attending colleges and universities or about 1.5% in lives of the population.

These figures are not such things as a numerical count in the manner the faculty accurate computations to show that there are many European students and women between the ages of 18 and 21 who, if these are estimated from a number of general statistics, it is estimated that almost 20% percent have the mental equipment to either college or law school. The actual figures in 1932, shows a per cent of these European female students who are women or men who are in substantial position justifies it. With the ever-increasing enrollment taking place every year it seems that the other economic groups are being treated according to the town.
