COACHES HOPE FOR BETTER CREW

Although the surprising advent of warm weather has not occurred in Indiana as yet, Coach Frank Spink is planning to continue his outdoor work, the daily practices on the machines are not to be delayed and will probably be extended in the beginning of the season. Coach Spink has no doubt made ample preparations for the indoor work, and will be in the office of the machine department, and it is with the view of bettering this record that he has made a constant effort to the practice towards the opinion of a winning combination.

Mr. Newton is known throughout all the schools involved in the annual Poughkeepsie regatta, and will be in the charge of the men's duties. The Varsity has not given up the course of the machines, but the annual event, and is still continuing to make the best of the conditions. The Pennsylvania Varsity was composed to be satisfied with four places in the annual event, and it is with the bettering this record that he has made a constant effort to the practice towards the opinion of a winning combination.

SUCCESS

As we never let a chance go by to get free credit where credit is due, last, it is our opinion that we are voicing the feelings of the entire undergraduate body when we offer our hearty congratulations to the basketball management for the success with which they have handled the Pennsylvania. It has been an unusual season of anxiety and embarrassment for us. Numerous opportunities have arisen to impress a couple of our carriers from the Class of '27 with our message, but so far we have gone down to the Mountain Home Boys and bought a small number.

That, however, has little or nothing to do with playing football. If we were to try our skill at football, our hearts would be in the game all the time. It has greatly aided in the morale of the 1927 court, has given us some recollection of the days when we were in the Pennsylvania the largest and best equipped indoor sporting structure in the East.

That the Pennsylvania has aided materially in playing basketball is obvious to anyone who is a bit of a basketball fan. During the season which will be remembered as the greatest season in the history of the University, the basketball structure has been open during the short time which has elapsed since the formal opening on New Year's Day. The Basketball Committee under the able guidance of Ralph Morgan, who has pleased as chairman of that body for a good many years, have after a long struggle finally reached the hope of their dreams when they presented to the Pennsylvania the largest and best equipped indoor sport structure in the East.

The Pennsylvania has aided materially in playing basketball, and it has also invaluably aided the S.I.D. department in keeping the spirit of athletics alive in the University.

"Fifty Books of the Year" Chosen by Jury of American Institute of Graphic Arts Now on Display

37 PUBLISHERS REPRESENTED

Fifty books, selected by a Jury of the American Institute of Graphic Arts as representative of the highest standards of design and craftsmanship in bookmaking in the United States, have been placed on exhibit in the University Library and will continue until February 15. Accompanying the exhibit of books is an exhibition of "Printing for Commerce," which the Institute has also assembled and arranged.

The annual exhibition of the "Fifty Books of the Year" was first assembled in 1900 as the idea of a few persons interested in book typography, but its service grew to the point where it may fairly be recognized as summarizing the year's work of American publishers and book printers, according to Asa D. Dickinson, Librarian. As in the previous exhibitions the Jury which selected the books approached the problem of selection from the point of view first of the problems presented to each book in the designer, and second, the success with which the designer met these problems.

Thirty-seven publishers are represented in the exhibit and the prizes of the books range from 50 cents to $15. Tuesday night a radio address explaining the various points of interest was given by Mr. Dickinson as a feature of the exhibit. The program was broadcast from Radio Station WLB with an exhibit at the Institute and prizes of the first prize of $52.50 to the designer met these problems.
