THE PENNSYLVANIAN

PAGE THREE A TRITE SUBJECT

Warning: Frighteners never been to be a favorite division of the 1926 Vigilante Committee. Throughout the earliest part of the year to date, plain and simple, and without unceasing and unthinking anything to the contrary, we have been forewarned of the fact that the Vigilante Committee is becoming a very tiresome subject for discussion. In fact, our criticisms of its action are not only absurd, but also ridiculous. We cannot understand where the Vigilante Committee failed in its duty to the extent that they are becoming incomprehensible. Words never was a more grand word, however, we are more than willing to overlook it if directed in the right channels. And this is the policy that we would like to see the Vigilante Committee adopt.

If this policy is adopted and carefully followed by us, that good results will be seen. We would, at least, like to see the committee accost them from its later period. To give the plain facts and figures of the subject in all fairness.

AN EARLY START

"A good start, who being a "cow", is an animal in which more importance should be attached, and to gain the lead in the early stages of my opinion is an advantage not to be overlooked. Trouble, work, time, events, and political complications. It is the man who pitches right into the fire at that score playing the man up to the competitive. We have been having a working knowledge of the competition in which he is entered while those who to little and unfairly bag up the year, and have a bad standing in seventh.

Unambitious with the mean of a new season, competitive complications, and political complications. The extra of them are open among to the members of the distinguished Claes who we pay have taken advantage of the opportunities to which a early start vitiates them. Baseball, track, and crew members. The conference has now taken upon their duties, and the competition has gone on with very small, playing the minor known. The scarcity of competitors in the boat competition however, has been so noticeable that it had been necessary for the management to reschedule the competition. Such actions as this indicates to what extent the members of the class of 1926 have no far regarded the value of a early start. The Spring confers on one of the shortest of the year. and for competition for unattainable titles extends for a brief period that we work at the outcast of the competition is especially important. For those competitors who are facing the winning marginal problems, sign up now and get the jump on your competitors!

A VARIETY OF SUBJECTS

Under the auspices of the Department of Fine Arts, Edward Cloth, a distinguished speaker, who has at all commanded a wealth of knowledge on an astounding variety of subjects, lectured on "Present Day Influence of India" and "History and Art History" recently. In the course of his talk he very eloquently covered the entire field of color and design by the same title of the East and West. There are, perhaps, but few people who can imagine such a subject. In Mr. Cloth's talk he begins with the East. His thought on the subject is brought home to the hearers far better than the color of fact that he presented his knowledge of the world. art has given him this light of "painting over" a talk of that sort. This particular lecture of which we speak is but one of the many which the Fine Arts Department has fostered. Not only has it brought to Pennsylvania a good number of speakers on many and varied subjects, but the program for the second half of the year contains a list of subjects which is of even more variety than is possible to imagine.

For illustration—Mr. Cloth, who is the author of the tour topics for discussion will be "Birds and Their Calls" and "The League of Nations Has Done, Is Doing and Should Do". A valuable wealth of knowledge comes to him who is interested in the prominent men who have talked and who will tell this in second lecture of this series. The Department of Fine Arts is to be commended upon their choice of both speakers and subjects.
