LACROSSE GAINING IN POPULARITY AT COLLEGES

Coach Fries of the University Lawmen Team Explains Misconception of Old Indian Game

PERMANENT INJURIES INFREQUENT

"Although very few people have serious conception of the game of lacrosse and most of these look upon it as a 'scalp-taking' game, nevertheless the game is rapidly gaining in popularity as an exciting sport among the college class," states Coach Fries, manager of the University lacrosse team. During the last year's campaigns at Colleges in Baltimore, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and others have taken up the sport and have found it a very worthwhile one.

"Contrary to the usual impression that the game of lacrosse is extremely dangerous, it is pretty rough," Coach Fries said. "During his four years of college coaching, he had no recognition of any permanent injury to a player, although minor cuts and bruises are fairly frequent."

The coach said: "The reason for the persisting misconception regarding the game of lacrosse is that spectators know very little about the five points of the game and that the game is as yet played in a few of the colleges."

"Prejudices often have the impression that the purpose of the game is to circumvent and kill an opponent with such speed as to kill or maim, 'kill him,' etc. Because of this misconception the belief is prevalent that the entrance of a lacrosse game is a violation of human instinct to kill."

In conclusion Coach Fries stated, "The purpose of the game of lacrosse is to consider the adoption of a rule which will penalize a player who tries to stop an opponent with the stick, who jary cuts the ball, and it this pair is adopted much more cars will be seen in opening an opponent and the game will lose most of its old fashioned interest."
