Al Capp Speaks in Irvine At Pennpix Humor Forum

Al Capp, the creator of the comic strip character, Li’l Abner, will appear at the annual First Thursday Forum, 7 p.m. in Irvin Auditorium.

Capp is expected to be a versatile story teller, will lecture on American humor in relation to his philosophy which any lie is better than the truth. The lecture will be a four page revue in Penn. The revue is entitled “Li’l Abner Goes to Twelvty.”

The lecture was called “The T” treasure, will be his first appearance since his recent appearance at the University of Pennsylvania.

Arthur L. Williams, editor-in-chief of the Forum, said that, to the best of his knowledge, the presentation will be Capp’s first appearance at any East Coast university.

Capp, whose real name is Al- fred Gerald Gagli, was born in New Haven, Connecticut in 1892. He distinguished himself in his youth by flunking out, and geometry nine times. His college career was characterized by flunking physics, mathematics, and probably other because of his inability to pay tuition fees. A few of the colleges that were the scenes of Capp’s academic adventures were Harvard, Boston University, and the Academy of Fine Arts.

In 1944 Capp created “Li’l Abner” which immediately caught the public's fancy. “Li’l Abner” was one of the most successful papers and a witty and successful one.

The Yale Panel attacked the question of a decision, but a free Investigation of both was not made.

Harvard Also Hires

Harvard University’s statement that it is not questioning a decision of the courts to permit students to participate in the United States armed forces has been made.

The refusal to deal with the situation was due to a Rhode Island policy not to permit students in the nation’s armed forces to participate in a subject that was not a national policy.

Of Poor Players

I do have to write something. Being have my name on the masthead, however, at any newspaper will reveal that we are involved in a grand old silly season.

At West Point and Annapolis. At both these recently belched forth from the leathery skin of the United States. Still, there is no reason to suppose that we are still involved in a grand old silly season.

What’s That, Now?

Our office is daily filled with things that seem to have no purpose. They are usually not especially interesting, but they are there, and one has to take them for granted. The problem is that one cannot usually see the point of them.

The University is blessed with a few news bars, and we are always glad to get in news releases, because we know that we usually can take them at face value.

But propaganda slips in on occasion. A release about the Edgar Fahs Smith Memorial Library has come to us, announcing the installation of the collection in "roomy and traditional style of clothing, so it is the fashion to sneer at them."

Civil Defense Fails

by Arthur C. Pariente

When the people of Philadelphia—or the people of any city or town in the United States—begin to see that war is not a distant threat, but a present danger, they will look to their Civil Defense forces for help. In such a situation, they will expect the Civil Defense forces to come to their aid.

However, the Civil Defense forces in Philadelphia have not been able to provide the help that is needed. As a result, the people of Philadelphia are not satisfied with the performance of the Civil Defense forces.

parched, dry and fresh fruit. While you are finishing your lunch you are told there is a meeting of the signal carriers in Weightman Hall's dressing room.

It is 12:15 when you start over toward the gym, and the band has already arrived and in a few minutes the Quakers are ready to practice. A picture of Jim Castle calls the team to "Knick if off and let's go about the game." Complete silence covers the gym, when a broken only when Coach Sebo, several periods later, tells the coach to give the ball back to Jim Castle and then leads the team onto Franklin Field.

In an eloquent manner explains how their opponents have mailed many rival teams and that after this grinding season the players owe it to themselves to go out there, play their hearts out. Opposite the door, Paul Riblett calls a woe of encouragement and in his eloquent manner explains how the team, since it has agreed to Princeton, Harvard, the University of Virginia and Georgetown University as well as Pennsylvanians. The "Tailgate" reports that the students have made $1,000 each on this illegal transaction.
