Big 10, PC Blast TV Grid Policy

by John Dugan

The Big 10 conference has announced the PC policy, a restriction on restricted football games, which will go into effect at the beginning of the 1964 season.

According to the policy, each college will be allowed to play one home and one away game per year. This will enable all 10 teams to meet and will provide more opportunities for regional television scheduling.

The Big 10's policy is designed to increase the number of broadcasts and to reduce the number of restricted games. This will give more exposure to schools and help them to achieve their goals.

Brown U. Library Bettering

Brown University is taking steps to improve lighting conditions in its library, according to the Brown Daily Herald.

Several improvements are being made, including the installation of new lighting fixtures and the addition of additional reading lamps. The University is currently studying the problem of restricted televising.

12 Games A Year

Under this "Game of the Week," the remaining conference games will be televised, except the one conference game a week. The current program calls for only one home and one away game per year.

Brown University's policy of restricted televising is one of the few in the nation, and it will be seen as a good example of how such programs can be conducted.

Brown University News

Brown University is excited about the new policy, and they are looking forward to the upcoming season.

Grad Study Funds Are Divided

Equally Among Four Fields

Fellowship and scholarship funds amounting to $6,000,000 for the current fiscal year have been divided equally between four fields of learning:

- Arts
- Science
- History
- Economics

The funds are divided equally among the fields in order to support the highest level of scholarship.

The number of scholarships awarded is based on the number of applicants and the quality of their applications.

Quakers Deleate Swearthome

by John Dugan

The Quakers' Fall Production, "My Three Angels," will open on October 18th.

The play, a comedy by Sam and Bella Spewack, will be presented tonight and tomorrow night. The act is set in a bamboo house in French Guiana, on Christmas Eve and Christmas morning of the year 1916. It is a story of how three kind-hearted con men help a family in distress.

The project will be run under the system of competitive bids, with each firm working independently.

Brown University women's basketball team will be exempt from the subject in the Pennsylvania State game which was banned by the N.C.A.A. Game of the Week.

College Faculty Adopts Advance Standing Plan

for Talented Entrants

Must Be Approved by Education Council; Sharber, Comm. Chairman, Announces Vote

The College faculty voted to adopt the plan to consider for advanced standing in the fall of 1915 outstanding entering students who have studied certain experimental courses on the freshman level during their last year in secondary school, announced Dr. Matthias A. Shaheen, professor of English and Chairman of the Committee on Instruction, yesterday.

Through this plan able students who have taken the advanced courses will be exempt from entrance examinations. They will be exempt from the subject in the examination given by a faculty committee, which is related to the eligible colleges participating in the plan.

Eleven Courses

The courses in the subject will be chosen from the following:

- English composition
- Latin, French, Russian, Spanish, French, history, mathematics, science, and languages.

This plan is not to be confused with any examinations given in the foreign languages and literature, which are given at the same time because the student will be eligible for his diploma, without making up for any examinations given by the foreign language professors for the examinations in the language.

Not Automatic

However, in a letter to Dr. Lloyd Dale, Dean of the College, he said, "We are not going to make this plan automatic. When a second course is completed, he will have to pass the course in advanced standing, he must be exempt from entrance examinations, and the student must have completed the Department curriculum and then apply to the College Executive Committee for admission.

Christmas Basket Drive Is Example Of University-Community Cooperation

by Edwin Leby

The All-University Drive to provide Christmas baskets of food for needy families in the surrounding area of West Philadelphia is a fine example of the way in which the University of Pennsylvania can exert the rightful and necessary leadership which the University's position within the community demands.

This viewpoint, Aaron Levine, Executive Director of the Citizens' Council on City Planning, said. The Daily Pennsylvanian in an interview said that the leadership part that the University must exert in the Philadelphia community life is realized.

Levine, who holds a graduate degree in political science from the University, pointed out that rapid transition from a desirable and good place in which to live and work, an area that is blighted and no longer able to really attract people the way it did in the past.

The University has a selfish interest at stake in the West Philadelphia situation. The AllUniversity basket drive is one way in which student faculty, and employees can actively help to combat the problem in a personal way, Levine stated.

The Citizens' Council on City Planning is a non-profit, non-partisan organization of citizens, students, faculty, staff, business, community, and professional groups. It performs a dual function of interpreting to the citizen the programs of public agencies concerned with physical improvement of Philadelphia, and of expressing to those agencies the reactions and constructive criticisms of citizens interested in a better city.

Philadelphia, and many other major American cities, badly in need of better planning and replanning, are, according to Levine, "rotting away at the core."

The Federal Housing Act of 1949, prepared by the late Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, established the validity of the need for redeveloping the housing in which we live. The bill provided for $1,500,000,000 to be used in assisting cities in redevelopment.

Local and state legislation followed this action. Philadelphia was one of the first to employ a Redevelopment Authority, named by Levine the "most progressive act since free education."

For the Urban Redevelopment Act which gave public agencies such as the City Planning Commission, Housing Authority, and the Redevelopment Authority the power to rebuild areas for the good of the neighborhood; literally, a "free hand" to rebuild for the best use.

Levine explained the procedure involved in redevelopment. First, the City Planning Commission selects the area for rebuilding, which is then certified by the city as an "area in need of redevelopment." The Commission then draws up a plan which the Redevelopment Authority, takes over in order to begin a search for "redevelopers." These are investors who are willing to finance the rebuilding of sections of the area.

The University area is one of 17 areas in Philadelphia certified as in need of redevelopment. Although only a part are being redeveloped, the University area certified for redevelopment in a part, reveals a number of disturbing facts.

The area is one of the city's worst for juvenile delinquency and poor housing. A mapping of "social breakdown" in West Philadelphia by the geographic units of the 19 census tracts shows that 30 of our 65 populated tracts indicate progressively more serious demoralization, based on the factors of housing, condition and cross-race, health, family, reported crime, and traffic density (number of persons on public assistance).

The area is drawn by the University's December 9, 1954. Vol. LXVIII
