\textbf{Schonfeld Recommends Evaluation of Houses On Principles of Merit}

Committee of Four Set Up To Investigate Plan;

\textbf{Ratings To Be Published Before Rushing Opens}

Norman J. Schonfeld, president of the Interfraternity Council, last night proposed that a committee be set up to investigate the possibilities of ranking the 38 campus fraternities.

At the Council's regular meeting, Schonfeld claimed that a system of fraternity ranking could have many merits and that such a system has proved successful in other countries. Some possible basis of rating fraternity students, at least, the Council of Men's clubs, and fraternities participation in activities.

Schonfeld proposed that the ranking be done on a national level and that ratings would be given on a scale of 1 to 10.

Quakers Down Tigers; Leach Nets 32 Points

by Les Glassman

"Next to Tom Gola, Bart Leach is the finest all-around player, strength and shooting ability," the Quaker's head man praised the Quaker giant who led his team to a 73-69 victory over the Tiger men Saturday at the Palestra. The win was Leach's 32nd as the Quaker mentor, second to Cornell (4-0) in the Ivy League.

Leach had 32 points and 14 rebounds in his 19th straight 20-point game, tying the school record set by former Quaker star Tom Gola. Leach, who has played in all 19 games, is averaging 21.2 points and 13.2 rebounds a game, both second in the Ivy League.

The Quaker's big weakness was the foul line. Leach missed two of four free throws, the only points the Quakers missed in the Ivy League this season.

"Apart from Gola, I think that Leach is the finest player I ever have coached," said Jack McInerney, the Quaker assistant coach. "He is the complete player, and he is ready to play the game any way you want it played."

Leach scored 12 points in the first 20 minutes and 14 points in the second half.

The Quaker's Parland John promoted the team to win the Ivy League championship, winning the 200-yard breaststroke in the one hour of 2:27.7, which was two seconds better than the Cornell team record in the event.

Keller Wins Dive

Steve Keller captured the only other first place of the day for the Red and Blue in the diving event. Keller, a senior, won the 1-meter board.

"We didn't win as many events as we wanted to," said Coach Jack McInerney. "But we did win enough to take the Ivy League championship.

The Quaker's total of 112 points was 28 points ahead of the 84 points scored by the Red and Blue.

Leading by four points going into the final event of the day, the Quaker's shooters looked as though they would average their 63-22 defeat at the hands of Cornell last season. However, the Big Red managed to retain their unblemished record. The Quaker captain was the individual standout of the day, and the Quaker's team, in fact, was the first time that he had ever been defeated in Penn's Ivy victory over Yale.

Leach Stars

The Red and Blue registered their 24th straight victory in a 137-pound class. Ed Keating of Harvard, a junior, won by default from his opponent, a 16-year-old high school student.

The Quakers were ahead, 14-5, after the first two periods. However, the Red and Blue broke away in the final period, scoring 21 points to Penn's 8.

Evans Wins

George Evans won the opening match for the Red and Blue against the Penn Quakers. He defeated David Arima, a former freshman, 13-6.

"The Quakers want to take a shot at the Ivy League title, and I think they have a chance," said Coach Jack McInerney.

"Our team is better than last year, but we still have to work hard to win the Ivy League championship."

The Graduate Study Council offers an Advanced Study Program to enable exceptionally qualified individuals to obtain higher degrees in the prescribed fields. Under this plan the participants are employed in their chosen fields in industry and concurrently pursue graduate study.

The technical assignment will be on the Research and Engineering Staff of Lockheed Missile Systems Division. The Advanced Study Program will be at one of the Universities named above. If a sufficient number of qualified students apply, as many as 100 awards will be granted.

Teaching, admission fees and costs of textbooks covering the number of units required by the University for a Master of Science Degree, will be borne by Lockheed. A travel and moving allowance will be provided for those residing outside the Southern California area.

How to apply:

Contact your placement bureau or write

The Graduate Study Council for an application form and brochure giving full details of the program.
