The Easy Way

Guest readers, all is not really hopeless. If you have not studied for your exams, do not think that there are no ways to pass your course.

It is considered our opinion that the essence of writing a good paper is not so much eradication. of information but rather a superficial knowledge of your subject, it is sufficiently frequent to pass the course, and it is you are writing on the paper grade of the test that will make the most of what you know.

First of all, the following words will make any grade in the highest possible grade. First, the mind that grades your paper, because, if you are writing on the test grade of the test that will make the most of what you know.

Secondly, don't be afraid, in a pinch, to be a show-off. You cannot afford not to do what you can to impress the mind that grades your efforts. If you know a fact not related to the question and you can pull it into the question, do it, but don't do it carelessly, and do it appropriately. Example: The question is the character of Washington.) "And we cannot really do anything but imagine ourselves in his shoes..."

If you know the name of the epic, be sure, if you use it in your work, to give it a positive adjective. In this connection (see English professors, they help you think of the words like "great," "marvelous," "magnificent," "interesting," "abundant" and certainly the right word to use at that time.) Use them only if you know the sub- ject matter, not just the name of the epic.

Another device is one that we have already used. Foreign words should be used, but only where, in your mind, they help you to express a thought. Then you are calling attention to your (sic) in your infor- mation. Examples are: a ten, a dozen (In this case, it is not only a number but the size of the item, time, etc.), a score (for the faculty concert only).

We are not very firm in our choice of style. If it is any part of the examination, you are perfectly sure of your facts, your style may be in the open and unobscured. If you are not so sure, and if you are not so sure, it is a sacrilegious literary too much; the purpose of being involved is to make the instructor con- centrate on the factual parts of your paper. With areas of information that you are not sure of, your style may be in the open and unobscured.

Now moves the touchy part. The flower, as we have given above is known as a "show-off," but do not use it. Whatever it is, it would come out whole-hog for Rosenauer and Voltaire, and would be expected to put Darwin up on the back when he issued 1870, and take a stripe at Vatican Hill when he dashed through 1870. Do not do it, in history, and generally in other subjects, unless you are told by your instructor.

As for other suggestions, we might mention reading. It is an essential part of your college education, and you can read the books that you like, but we recommend that, too.
