Columbia Tops Cagers in Overtime Tilt, 90-82

by Ronald C. Anderson

Pennsylvania's varsity cagers lost a golden opportunity to chalk a win for the Engineers Saturday night when they dropped a 90-82 overtime thriller to third-place Columbia at the Palestra. The Quakers now have a 10-3 record, but second-place Princeton still holds the lead in what should be the championship deciding battle.

Peter Wightman, who was second man in the backcourt against Yale, adds their other two remaining matches against Princeton and Columbia.

Three Way Tie Possible

A three-way tie for the title means, first, that the Quakers probably would have to knock off the other two remaining teams, or second, that Princeton would have to suffer a defeat.

Fencers Down Engineers, 18-9

The Quaker varsity fences won their fourth match of the season against three defeated, Saturday, easily defeating a weak Lehigh squad, 18-9.

Maestro Lajos Csatari sublimated freely as it appeared from the outset that the Quakers would have no trouble in coping with their second straight match at the hands of the engineers.

Wally Farley was the only twister for the Red and Blue, as the single team compiled a 7-3 record. The epee and foil units both have a 3-2-6 record, and 3 marks respectively.

The match's leading fencer, however, was Csatari, who completed his three-match schedule for tomorrow.

The saber squad has been the most impressive of the league team last Saturday, posting a 13-0 record over the seven matches. The epee and foil units both have a 3-2-6 record, and 3 marks respectively.
