Parland Johnstone
by Gerry Hirschhorn and Art Gendler

Parland Johnstone possesses an unusual and seldom found talent: the ability to swim through water deftly only by the aural and visual stimuli around him. He has been able to perform his swimming techniques on the University of Pennsylvania as well as all swimming courses throughout the country.

Parland has been a great deal of the handicap that comes with his height and weight, which he uses to his advantage. He is able to perform his swimming in a way that seems almost effortless.

As for his win Saturday, Charlie felt that he was not surprised by the result. "It was a good race and I was pleased with my performance," he said.

The Pennsylvania Athletic Association has awarded Johnstone with a scholarship for his outstanding performance. He is currently working towards his degree in Mechanical Engineering.

For more information on Parland Johnstone, please visit the official website of the Pennsylvania Athletic Association.

Three Teams Advance in NCAA Tournament

Lafayette, Villanova, and College—ass advanced into the East regional.
Pennsylvania, last night, with first-round victories.

Lafayette moved to the Ivy League title—either Princeton or Columbia—kept the Wildcats faceless, as the Pennsylvanians beat the Columbia basketball team, 73-60. The score was tied at 56-56 with six minutes to go, but耜ic clutch shooting by Johnny McCaffrey and Bob Kelly gave the Wildcats the win, despite a Pitt victory performance by Williams.

Villanova led all the way in its win over Delaware. Ahead at one stage of the second half by 15 points, Villanova held on to wind up with its first-loss last-minute Blue Devil surge which tied the lead in one time before finally ran out.

In the nightcap, Lafayette put on an inspired second-half rally to bounce West Virginia, 90-81. The Mountainmen tallied their first Ivy win, a 20-point second half, which scored 16 in the first half, which held to a small fleet in the second period. Tom Gola and Al Young had 12 points each for the Explorers.

Fencers After Winning Record As Haverford Hosts Quakers

Pennsylvania's varsity fencing team traveled to Haverford for its second meet of the season to meet the Quakers in a match that will decide whether the Quakers' season ends with a winning or losing record.

The Quakers' slate now stands at 4-4, after the 3-6 record of last season. The Quakers have a record of 4-15-1, last season.

The match was intense, and a good time was had by all. The Quakers' season came to an end with a win or a loss.

Debating Fraternity To Sponsor Contest

The debate team of Delta Sigma Rho, national honor society debate fraternity, will again sponsor the Pennsylvania University's annual debate competition, according to President Albert E. Dubois.

Dubois cautioned pedestrians to obey traffic signals. He warned thatjaywalkers are often contributing factors to accidents caused when motorists see drivers who are trying to avoid striking persons moving against the light.

After finding that statistics show 55% of the accidents caused are a result of some traffic violation, Dubois said it is impossible to establish proof at all times thatjaywalkers are causing accidents due to their negligence.

New Magazine Format Is Presented at Meeting

According to tentative plans, the magazine will be managed by an editorial board composed of eleven members, including a managing editor, a copy editor, a literary editor, an production editor, an art director, a business manager, and heads of sections: Technical, Advertising, and Promotion department.

This group will select a five-man policy-making board, one of whom will be editor-in-chief. A permanent representative of Philadelphia will sit in non-voting capacity with the Senior Board.

Gleicher stated that as the proposal would have to go through considerable adjustments, he did not expect the magazine to come out until December. Gleicher is a former editor of the Yewmen. Further printing in the publication would be chosen on literary merit.

methods of Congressional investigating committees are reminiscent of the pork trials of the 1930's.

With reference to the impact of the recent changes in Soviet policy, Secretary Scott said that he felt that a struggle for power would dominate the consideration of the Russian leaders.

During, Scott said, Khrushchev may be the next to go. "He is not smart enough to simply stay in the top group and he is not smart enough to boost himself all the way to the top," he said.

In conclusion Scott said that there were some aspects of U. S.
foreign policy which made simplification of differences and way of getting out of them.
