University Receives Grant For Foreign Policy Institute

$113,000 Contributed by Richardson Foundation; Foreign Policy Institute Headed by Strauss-Hupe

Establishment of a foreign policy research institute here at the University has been made possible by a grant of $113,000 by The Richardson Foundation of Greensboro, North Carolina, President Harrell, announced.

The activities of the institute, which will be headed by Dr. Robert Strausz-Hupe, professor of Political Science at the University and chairman of the graduate program in International Relations, will be conducted with the study of major problems of international relations and their implications for the foreign policy of the United States.

In a speech given with the announcement of the Richardson Foundation's gift, Daily Pennsylvanian learned that the institute has a dual purpose.

The second purpose of the study is to provide basic information on which to base a foreign policy toward different countries.

Experience has shown, he furthered, that in some areas we have been successful, but in others our effectiveness is dubious.

The new institute will be dedicated to the study of the foreign policy of the United States in regard to the major countries of the world.

Dr. Strausz-Hupe will be associated with the institute.

The first project of the institute will be to study the foreign policy of the United States in regard to the major countries of the world.

W.H. Auden Reads His Poetry Hindered by Audience, Acoustics

Hampsted by an audience, the members of which had apparently just gotten out of bed with bad coughs, and an acoustically imperfect sound system, W. H. Auden reads selections from his Friday night.

In verse in the University Auden, who won the Pulitzer Prize for poetry in 1948, appeared both at the beginning and end of his readings to be somewhat ill at ease and unsure of himself. With the exception of these lapses, however, his readings brought across the interpretation his desired.

Auden's reading was divided into three sections. The first, into his section of "The Orators," Auden included "Winds," "Woods," "Mountains," "Lakes," "Islands," and "Serenity.

The second section of poems roused from error in form from the railroad tracks to a poem of milieu, "Nocturne." Following this noontime, he concluded with a selection of four works based on times of day.

How glad I am that a word has been said against the "unnecessary enforcement of the 'Ivy League' Club". It is true that pressure from minority religious groups in your community can create an atmosphere of intolerance. The pressure points for the police to "all quietly in the corner". It is an indication that the very man who is technically not old enough to be able to use judgment when drinking alcoholic beverages is perhaps the dummy of the party. For we were there one day when an immature boy suddenly falls and kills a policeman. This notion becomes a straight-thinking, mature human being over the age of 21, and perhaps the "unnecessary enforcement of the 'Ivy League' Club". Tennis Prospects Begin Outdoor Work Monday

With four days of indoor practice in the Palestra under their belts, the varsity tennis teams are looking forward to the beginning of intensive outside work next Monday. Until Friday, only practice sessions will be devoted to the freshmen, and lifting up for the varsity.

Coach Wallace Johnson will be banking on the services of five returning lettermen—captains Charles Rieger, Morris Krome, Dennis Brown, Paul Myers and Ted Meik. To carry the Quaker varsity through its 15-game schedule, Johnson sees an excellent possibility for the number one spot between Rieger and Krome.

Indoors only during the cold winter months, competition has been so keen that none of the other positions in the book is definitely decided. This year’s team, regarded as one of the best ever, was the result of a battle for the number one spot between Rieger and Krome.
