Publication of Lectures

From Series Last Spring

College Alumni Society to Finance Series

Under Title of 'Integration of Western Culture'

The Philomathean Society and the Pennsylvania Literary Review have announced the joint publication of the speeches from last year's Philomathean lecture series.

The series, which was presented by five faculty members, will be distributed to all interested students and faculty members for a nominal charge. Under present plans, the series will be published by the end of November and the title will be 'Integration of Western Culture.'

Good Dancing, Plot and Dialogue Make "Fair Weather" Entertaining Musical

By Link and Levinson

This season has been a sparse one for musicals. Since "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" has summered, only "Daddy Long Legs" emerged as a fairly creative musical. Now, however, MGM has released another entry, "Fair Weather," a tale of three war buddies whose escapades on the lip sync front这些年 are called "Fair Weather." On the credit list are Gene Kelly, Stanley Donen and Arthur Freed, the three men responsible for the brilliant "Singin' in the Rain." While "Weather" is no "Rain," the cinematic climate is good.

Broadway's Comden and Green know the value of solid plotting, satire, and enter- taining dialogue. They have combined all three in their bright screen treatment. The story has an amusing premise: three war buddies swear to meet each other in ten years and recite their friendship. When they do meet, however, they find that fox trot nostalgia, has worn thin over the decades.

All of this is merely the springboard for some marvelous dances and a few light- as-air scenes at TV's "This Is Your Life" type of mawkishness.

Kelly, Kidd and Daily Successful

Kelly teams nicely with choreographer Michael Kidd and Dan Daily. Cyd Charisse cannot act, but in a skillful's Own non-sequitur number she goes through enough sizzling numbers to have the audience on the floor. "Fair Weather" is a genuine winner.

The film's best sequence occurs when Douglas Gray, a Hollywood newcomer, falls across a song called "Thanks a Lot But No Thanks." In this smartly-staged routine, Miss Gray shows a musical comedy finesse equal to her Broadway performances. The Technicolor, as well as the Technicolor roller skates and, in one number, a split seven technique that makes the most of Cinemascope's possibilities. Everything has been done with pace and style. The MGM orchestra sounds fine, the Anser color, while it doesn't match the excep- tionally Technicolor process, is good, and the music is light and catchy. We suggest you see it.

For those interested, the film introduces the Marvels, the dancing MC of TV's "46.000 Question." Fortunately, he has a small role. "Ulysses," now at the Randolph, is a difficult picture to review. There are certain films that every critic gets with, and there are others that even the critics' wrath seems to stem from the fact that every critic was taken with Mome's 'Romeo and Juliet.' "Ulysses," on the other hand, made a critic spew these things on his press release, in formation of his typewriter and let's go.

"Ulysses" Proven Entertaining

 Actually, "Ulysses" is not a bad picture. It is, like most spectacles, entertaining. The critics' wrath seems to stem from the fact that great literature was taken with Homer's poem. "Ulysses," in fact, is only "Fair Weather" of its pleasantly off-beat items, "It's All Fair Weather." On the credit list are Gene Kelly, Stanley Donen and Arthur Freed, the three men responsible for the brilliant "Singin' in the Rain." While "Weather" is no "Rain," the cinematic climate is good.

In Time Trials
Both the freshman and vari-city cross-country teams continued to turn in improved performances in their last time trials before the opening of the season from this year's trial.

Bare Torso Contest
Penn, in fact, the time results would be have been more impressive, but began with Dan Maliszewski, who was setting a blistering pace for the first three miles was forced to quit because of the effects of a foot injury.

Jerome Barr continued to lead the Quakers by finishing the Bill Yates Cross Country Course in 28.47 to Marc Brown by 11 seconds.
