Bishop Discusses Freud Had Artistic Insight
With Varsity Club

There is not a uniform University-wide policy on rostering, revealed Dr. Robert K. Bishop, assistant to the Dean of the College, as he was questioned by Varsity Club members in his group meeting at last night's Blood Drive. He explained that the administration reviews the problem about the time of late class conflicts with practice sessions in recent years this problem has come to the extent that it will be handled in the spring. It is hoped that its handling will have its eleventh operation today.

Athletic Council Desires
The Varsity Club desires to set up a permanent council to discuss problems when they arise. As a part of the general idea of such a council, Dr. Bishop and the student body representatives will find out what could be done. However, he, the question of whether the problem of late classes affects the students was not directly addressed. In the previous sessions made by the Varsity Club, it was noted that the football team was limited in its classroom space and that a new dormitory was not available.

Each School, Dept. Autonomous
The problem, according to Dr. Bishop, is always an individual problem. The classes don't consider the whole problem, and each school is free to set its own policy and each department is free to schedule its seminars at a time suitable to the instructors and the students. It is often the case that classes in both morning and afternoon are being held in the same room. In addition, most laboratory sessions are from two to four.

The Varsity Club in other business, approved the idea of holding a Blood Drive sponsored by the co-educational fraternities of the university. The idea was first suggested by Francis D. Andre. Letitia Jones would award the first ticket in the drawing and would bear the cost of the promotion. She would hire the blood drive committee to run the ticket sales.

Star of 1939 Penn Players' Show Applauds Cast's Acting of '55 'Our Town' Production

The 1955 Pennsylvania Players production of "Our Town" is certainly acted, said Mrs. James A. Bice, a senior at the University, in a rehearsal last Friday. The cast includes, as Elizabeth Toon, Donna M. Seidman; as Dr. Gibbs, John W. M. Thompson; as Mr. Webb, Richard L. Falen; and as Mr. Murphy, Robert B. Voss.

Chairman of the cast, Dr. Julius Whitten, the fourth Philanthropic Lecture of the fall series yesterday afternoon in Alumni Hall of Dietrich Hall. Stating that Freud's art Shakespeare's, Dr. Whitten, assistant professor of psychology, said, "If only he hadn't claimed scientific knowledge, we would appreciate him as we do Shakespeare." Dr. Whitten said that Freud was the first to establish the theory that the unconscious mind could not predict behavior and could explain it only by the necessary properties to the psychic apparatus which would account for the behavior already explained.

The lecture believes that relationships between humans is profoundly affected in a most intricate way. All the creative enforcers of modern scientists, painters, dramatists and architects also show a definite Freud influence.

Dr. Whitten outlined Freud's basic theory of a psychic mechanism consisting of three component parts, the Id, Ego and Super-Ego. The Id, existing completely in the subconscious, contains two instincts: Eros—the Instinct of Love—Source of every sexual desire; and Thanatos—the Instinct of Death—Source of every death wish.

"In the present," declared Mrs. Dallas, "there is no absolute owner of government, exercised by none of them if they are to stand alone with any dignity, they must pull their weight in business, in the professions and in politics."

Mrs. Dallas discussed the main reaction to the word "woman" being the word "irresponsible." It, she said, is an explanation that the "woman's place is in the home," and that attitude is the woman's greatest obstacle in the political world.

"While the present," declared Mrs. Dallas, "there is no absolute owner of government, exercised by none of them if they are to stand alone with any dignity, they must pull their weight in business, in the professions and in politics."

Penn Basketball Team Opens '55-'56 Season At Swarthmore Tonight

Three returning lettermen will be in the starting lineup when Penn's basketball squad opens an improving 22-game schedule at Swarthmore tonight.

With All-Ivy Bert Leach and set-shot artist Karl Hageland gone, coach Stanley has based his attack on veterans Joe Sturgis, Frankie Murray and Lou Rozas. Sturgins will second to Leach in scoring last year with 442 points, but will probably be replaceable in the middle. Murray is known for his outside shots and Rozas' basketball defense as a young gun.
Renvovation of Palestra Facilities Beneficial To Players and Fans

day Dowley

It Philadelphia area basketball fans don't recognize the Palestra when they step inside it for the first time this year, it won't be surprising, for the Quakers' home court was undergoing its most recent renovation since it was constructed in 1924. When finished this fall, the Palestra's entire seating capacity will have been increased from 8,700 to 11,000 seats. The second largest 5-seat arena in the country, the Quakers, the fifth college majors in basketball, will be playing in a completely new and modernized facility.

Seating Capacity Enlarged

One of the most pressing problems was the seating capacity. Although few of last year's all attendants expected that the program would grow larger greatly, especially when there would be no competition from college contests in nearby Convention Hall. With the increase in the capacity of the arena, the attendance is up by about 1,500 seats.

Improved View For Spectators

Another improvement is the installation of new single-support baskets. According to sports experts, Bob Paul, several hundred satellites per game will give "every fan in every seat an unobstructed view of the court.

Impressed have been made for the benefit of the players as well as the spectators. One of the most important benefits was the elimination of the temporary wooden bleachers. According to Coach Paul, the new baskets are in every unobstructed view of the court.

Thousands of spectators have been impressed with the new baskets. According to Coach Paul, the new baskets are in every unobstructed view of the court.

With many nationally-ranked teams scheduled to appear in the Palestra's 50 games during the season, Football and Basketball, Press in the lower stand has been drastically increased. New stands, and several outside stations will use the new setup. Channel 12 is televising the second of 30 doubleheaders last Saturday. The new setup will give an unobstructed view of the court in every seat.

Today's column is about Christmas gift suggestions, and I suppose you think I'll begin by suggesting Father Norris. Well, the joke's on you. I'll do no such thing. Why should any of you people who have the dough together, who belong to a fraternity, be interested in reading this column? This makes an absolutely smoking Christmas gift. Only a poor afflicted soul with astrological taste buds needs to be told about the new Philip Morris' bracing flavor; its freshness, lightness, pleasantness, gentleness; its truth, its beauty, its brotherliness. If you are a leader in this world, why shouldn't we waste the time telling you what you already know?
