On Integration and a New Life at Chapel in Irvine

The thirty-sixth annual Interfraternity Week starts today, culminating with the Interfraternity Ball, Friday night, at the Franklin Hotel.

Although the Ball is the high point of the Week, various other events will highlight the week’s earlier phases, such as the receiving of faculty members for luncheons at the various fraternity houses.

McCook will feature the Tau Epsilon Phi pledge relay at Franklin Hotel. Theta Pi has won the event the past two years.

Chaplain Edward G. Harris will speak on "Integration and a New Life" in Irvine Auditorium at 11 a.m. Thursday. Each fraternity will be visited by a chaplain, with a religious discussion after dinner.

Tuesday afternoon, the various fraternities will hold their respective initiation luncheons. Each house will be visited by a member of the administration whom it has chosen. The houses and their guests are: Acacia, Dr. Helen Funk; Alpha Chi Omega, Dr. G. W. Rice; Alpha Sigma Phi, Dr. Melvin M. Atkinson; Delta Chi, Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. D. Receives Old Pennsylvanians

The Daily Pennsylvania has been given three bound volumes of The Pennsylvania, periodicals of the Daily Pennsylvania, which are believed to be part of the special collection owned by Owen J. Roberts, former Dean of the Law School and now a Senator in the orton House of Representatives.

The three volumes are for the months, 1948-49, 1950-51, and 1951-52. They were purchased by Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Kerr, a personal friend of Dr. Henry A. Abrahams, the Political Science department.

The volumes have been given to the Daily Pennsylvania through Lawrence M. Rosenthal, business manager.

The copies of The Pennsylvania are bound in red paper and are in excellent condition, considering their age. The Daily Pennsylvania is specially interested in the collection, since the late Justice Roberts was a reader for that year.

One of the three bound editions of early issues of The Pennsylvania referred to has been owned by the late Owen J. Roberts, a member of the law school, before Pennsylvania voters in the April primaries.

T. Selected for AAU Tour;

Haines Will Visit Africa

Pennsylvania's star sprinter John Haines will be one of eight championship track athletes to tour Africa for the AAU, it was announced Friday in New York.

Haines told The Daily Pennsylvania that he thinks the trip "represents a good opportunity to see the world and to represent Pennsylvania." He earned his place on the team after a two-week tryout in the Law School, considering their age

The first meeting will be March 30 and return April 13, will complete in Maine, the Gold Coast, Nigeria and Kenya.

Coach Kenneth Doherty said Friday that he thinks the tour is "a wonderful opportunity for John." He added that "the choice of Haines is going to make this trip.

The other men in the group will be hurle Charles Peak of the U.S. Army, Douglas Powell, of Alaska, broad jumper and hurdler; George King, New York University distance runner; Mal Whitfield, Los Angeles A.C. sprinter, and New York Pioneer javelin thrower.

The women team is Ann Fages, of Oakland California, and Karen Anderson, Landover, Maryland, 100 yard dash and discus thrower.

The university representative who found for the AAU was Dr. Bernard Cataldo, president of the Pennsylvania Association of Universities.

The most outstanding entry, which will be chosen by popular vote, will earn a prize of $1000 in the all-star charity meet.

The conference was held in the main hall of the University faculty. There will be a meeting in the University faculty building.

The news that the University might not observe Skinner Day this year comes as a distinct blow to those of us who have been bolstered up all this grey winter with thoughts of sunshine, the picturesque and de-odorized Schaeffky and B—R.

We naturally wonder why this stand has been taken. And the proposed answer which wafts across Woodland Avenue from Logan Hall is that several other institutions are following the same day by the Boat Clubs along Boat-house Row and that, therefore, the Skinner Day festivities would blacken the name of the University by shocking the Boat Club crowd.

Everybody, however, knows that Skinner Day has become of late practically a tradition for the University and that it is one of the few examples of almost total participation by the student body. A national magazine, whether rightly or wrongly, used picture of Skinner Day festivities and thus made the friendship between the University and skull society life in an article on Ivy League superiority.

Now what happens? Are we to be robbed of this pleasant outing merely because of what might happen? Is the present Senior Class so afraid to meet the world unprepared, mawkish, hopelessly?

Apparently so, unless the Student Affairs Committee, which meets this Friday, changes the verdict handed down earlier to the committee chairman. Naturally enough, we have the selfish reason that we like Skinner Day but also because it is rather late to be changing shifts in mid-stream, as it were.

John Young asks:

How does research differ from development work at Du Pont?

John Aaron answers:

Well, John, it's hard to define the difference in a way that will satisfy everybody, because one always finds a lot of overlapping between research and development work. But most people agree that there are differences, especially in time sequence. Research work comes first, because one of its main objectives is to establish or discover new scientific facts that will support the foundation for new industrial developments. In other words, research men seek new knowledge about things, generally working with small quantities of it.

Development work comes later, and Du Pont has two main types. First, there is new process development. Here scientists and engineers develop the process most of the time of research so that new chemical products can be profitably manufactured on a large scale. Usually, full-scale plants can be made more effective and cost-saving methods. Pilot-plant and semi-works operations are usually included under this heading.

Second, and in most kinds of development work is directed toward improvement of existing processes and products. Here the emphasis is on yield increase, utility, product, increase output, and solve sales service problems as they arise. Technical service, research, and that brings back to the overlapping I previously mentioned.

There are genuine differences, John, but a good deal of similarity, especially in the constant need for imaginative and creative effort. I think you'll find that research and development work are equally challenging and rewarding at Du Port.
