Sub-Committee Formed For Study of Activities; Pitt Named as Chairman
Will Study Activities With View Towards University Supervision, Better Organization

A new sub-committee to study student activities, under the chairmanship of Robert H. Pitt, dean of admissions, was announced by George B. Peters, dean of men.

The purpose of the new sub-committee is to study the current student activity program with particular emphasis on supervision, conduct and financing for both immediate and long-range programs, Peters stated.

At present the sub-committee is making a cursory study of each activity on the whole program. In this way the better ones will be decided and the value of the various activities will need further investigation, Pitt said.

Reason Found
The reason for this was found in the failure of the investigation in the past on the activity program.

The committee will compare the University's activity programs at different eastern institutions, with emphasis on Ivy League schools, he stated.

Members of the committee are Dr. Paul A. Vater, vice-dean of men, and Dr. Robert S. Gillett, head of the department of English, and John Defremery, president of the Beta Gamma Sigma chapter at Pitt.

The group will face the present under University supervision.

Conduct Reviewed
The conduct and direction of the different activities will also be reviewed.

The statement said that such a review on other campuses in order to determine the worth of the present system.

The purpose of the present system of activities will be to study the functions of the activities program and to look at the present view of more or less financial aid.

1-F Week Feature
Of Fourth Highball; Issue on Sale Now

The theme of the fourth issue of the Highball, which goes on sale this afternoon, is an Interfraternity Intensity Week.

"Origin of the Species," by Charles Darwin, is the subject of the special page, which includes a feature story on the history of the speciesrace.

This article is a satire on the origin of the F-Ball. Two small downtown theaters are described in detail.

Les Glazemans' "Opposites Attraction," which was one of the most popular articles in the first issue, will be included in the new issue, also with Pennsylvania Sports anecdotes.

Link and Levinson will have two stories about the strike. The first, "The Stadium," is about a young boy who writes a story about wielding newspapers. The other, "The Strike," is about a young boy who has an interest in making a strike.

For the first time, the issue includes a feature story on the "Day of the Aluminum." Other features include a story on the "Day of the Weekend" and a "Day of the Student Party." It is also the last time the issue has a "Day of the Student Party." It is also the first time a letter is a feature story in the issue. It is the first time that two letters about the previous issue are included.

Undergrads Vote Resolution Favoring Keeping Skimmer

CSA To Give Decision At Meeting Tomorrow

The Undergraduate Council last night adopted a resolution placing the council on record as being in favor of having annual Summer Skimmer Day on May 19 and won't be there when the University students are there.

It was also noted that the council will be working on its annual Skimmer Day. Once and they will finally have the council in the student vote.

The Student Comments
John Swiege, secretary of University Council, stated that the student event is a "show of selfishness, which is the most that will be done." He said that the council is going to be doing the best they can on the river and that the Spectator will be brought out at the council meeting on the last night of the University of Pennsylvania's finest traditions and best opportunities. He is the originator of the "University Family's," which will be held on the river. He also added that the council is going to be doing the best they can on the river and that the Spectator will be brought out at the council meeting on the last night of the University of Pennsylvania's finest traditions and best opportunities.

Skimmer Day in honor of our Vanvania's finest traditions and best opportunities.

Based on Good Faith
Dr. Eiseley began the discussion by stating that the question of the ethics of the environment is what ought to be done and not what is done. He stated that businesses are trying to reflect the ethics of our entire society, business practices are largely dictated by ethical and legal considerations. He added that businesses which do not engage in activities with the consent of the community, are not being ethical.

Dr. Eiseley also said that businesses must engage in activities with the consent of the community, in order to reflect the ethics of the environment. He stated that businesses are not being ethical if they are doing activities without the consent of the community, and will continue to do so until the businesses are ethical.

Letters to the Editor

Editor, Daily Pennsylvania:

As the reporters search through the phantasmagoria of the truth begins a company of some unknown characters. Some of them are good friends, and others enemies. But it is the primary task of the reporter to separate the wheat from the chaff, to find the truth behind the lies and the half-truths. In this never-ending battle, the reporter must never lose sight of the end goal—making sure that the truth prevails and that justice is served.

We truly appreciate the work of the Daily Pennsylvania. We believe that the newspaper plays a crucial role in informing the public and holding those in power accountable. It is through the power of the press that we are able to learn about important issues and make informed decisions. Thank you for your dedication to journalism.

Sincerely,
[Name]

P.S. I also wanted to express my gratitude for the excellent coverage of the recent event. Your reporting was thorough and accurate, and it helped me understand the situation better.

Editor, Daily Pennsylvania:

I am writing to express my support for the Daily Pennsylvania. As a member of the community, I value the newspaper's role in providing local news and holding our leaders accountable. Your coverage of recent events has been excellent, and I appreciate the dedication of your staff.

However, I do have one concern. As the costs of publishing increase, I worry that the newspaper may struggle to sustain itself. I urge our community to support the Daily Pennsylvania through subscriptions and donations. Together, we can ensure that our local news remains strong.

Sincerely,

Four Mermen Compete In Easterns at Cornell

Pennsylvania's four leading swimmers journey to Cornell today to compete in the sixteenth annual invitation individual championships of the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming League. The meet will be held Saturday and Sunday.

Among the Penn swimmers expected to take the honors in the 200-yard backstroke and the 100-yard event is Arthur, who can win the All-American championship. He will be accompanied by Johnstone and Free and Coreman in the short freestyle.

Gleeson, as usual, will compete in the 200-yard individual medley and is expected to win in the individual medley. He has also been a consistent winner in the 20-yard relay.

In addition to the three returning champions, Yale, winner of both events last year, has three of its men returning in the 100 free and two of its three in the 200-yard medley. The freshmen are E.A. Andrews, Dan Correll and John Dine. The medley relay race is made up by Sande Dunihe and Bill Adams.

Kutyna's tie with the Ivy's Australian relay today is rated as the heat to be held in both the 100 and 50-yard freestyle events. In last week's meet against Harvard, Ayub established a new world mark for the 100 with a brilliant 48.4 time.

In the breaststroke, Don Kutyna and Arthur are rated favorites. The Ivy's victory in the 200-yard freestyle.

NCRI Radio Program

W9WY will broadcast a special program as a prelude to the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming Championships this evening at 8:30. Entitled "NCRI Salute," the program will feature interviews with Bill Adams of Dartmouth and Dave Coreman of Brown. Admissions are free and all the stars of this year's meet were guests.
