Editorial

- The Open Door

In our editorial statement, we set forth the policy that "we would never be your door to any student or group with a worthy cause." In the ordinary course of a newspaper this implies that we stand ready to support editorially any actions that would, in the writer's view, be beneficial to the University. This interpretation of the statement is certainly correct.

In a more general sense, however, we had hoped to extend an invitation to individuals or groups to seek us out whenever we may be of help—even if it extends beyond the ordinary line of newspaper production. A newspaper is responsible to its readers for complete and accurate news coverage and for an editorial policy dedicated to the purpose of bettering the community. In addition, however, as a central agency it must avail itself to citizens who wish to make the community a better one.

We feel pleased, therefore, when the Playmakers brought their proposal to us. No group should be denied the opportunity to engage in an activity which will benefit its members and the University as much as will this production of "Men of a Haircut." The Pennsylvania Players' musical productions in the past two years have brought it to the forefront. The serious dramatic productions have been evident. To fill this gap, and to provide enjoyment for themselves, 13 experienced performers have grouped together for the purpose of producing only this one play. The determination of this group is to be admired—and justified. We are proud to be associated closely with them and pleased that we are able to give them the opportunity to perform.
