Dr. Harnwell said that "the city should continue to prohibit parking on Locust Street.

The parking ban along Locust St. in the University area was removed late last week because of action taken by the City of Philadelphia.

For a period of time, the University area parking has been under study by the Traffic Engineers Department. Removal of the "no parking" signs is the first action taken as a result of this study.

Dr. Harnwell said that "the city should continue to prohibit parking on Locust Street.”

"The presentation begins at 8 p.m. today and will afford members of the public several days, MacNamara said.

Let's Get Tough!

For too long, now, some University students have been conducting themselves in an immature and disgraceful manner, and the University has suffered for it, in the eyes of other Philadelphians. Unfortunately, for most of these years, the students concerned have not suffered for it. They have been arrested, but not for a night, reprimanded and re-released. Friday, however, Magistrate John T. Foley suddenly and drastically reversed this trend, and we congratulate him on his stand.

The vast majority of the student body has always realized that the University is situated in the middle of a city, and acted accordingly. Those who cannot or will not accept this reality must learn to. Those who think that college students are somehow exempt from the ordinary laws of society must be made to realize they are part of society as a whole.

For 27 students, this has been made exceptionally clear. They have been held in $50 bail for court, and will stand trial charged of inciting to riot, riot, disorderly conduct and breach of the peace. One of them will also be charged with assault and battery on a police officer.

The University, in addition, will take action against any of its students who have been arrested or who are found to have played major parts in the riot. We hope that the action taken by the University will be strict enough to forestall, by example of what will happen as an inevitable consequence, any future disturbances.

At the same time, however, we feel the police could well teach a few lessons from this disturbance. We do not criticize their actions Thursday night; rather we congratulate them on attempting to quiet the students without resorting to arrests.

But the actions of some of the officers at the hearings Friday morning were, we feel, less than what should be expected. That these men were angry-because of wasted time, because of obvious disrespect on the part of the students, because of uniformed uniforms—we understand. Nevertheless, that a number of officers were, at least, overzealous in their attempts to see justice done was evident. Some 60 police were at the scene; more than 500 students were milling around; almost 150 were arrested. A number of officers stated that they were positive each and every student among the first 26 arrested was an active participant in the riot. In some cases, officers stated exactly where the person had been arrested, and what he had been doing at the time. All this they noticed at a riot in the middle of the night.

The time has come for some members of the University to grow up and accept their responsibilities. The time has come for the police to stop letting overzealousness make them look like the typical cops of a cheap thriller. The time has come, in short, for the members of the University, the police, and the community as a whole, to reach a mutual understanding.

Students Testify at Hearings

by Kenneth W. Sahres

Last Friday at approximately 9 a.m. 138, tired, disheveled students of the University filed into the hearing room of the 38th precinct for hearings which were a result of Thursday night's riot.

Each participating policeman stated under oath that of the first 28 arrested, every one was either actively taking part in the riot or running away from the police. Upon hearing this a loud cheer went up from the ranks of the students. To this A. Charles Peruto, assistant district attorney, said, "last night they showed no respect for the law, today they show no respect for the court."

The first student to be arraigned was Ernest Gage who kicked a policeman into the chest and was charged with inciting riot, assault and battery, breach of peace, resisting arrest and impeding an officer. His probability to go before the Grand Jury for the felony of assault and battery. He was held in $600 bail.

The students were first brought to the 38th precinct at 6:00 and were later taken to the City Hall jail. Conditions at the City Hall jail were no better than those of cattle packed in freight cars, said the students. The cells were estimated to be big by twelve feet and as many as fourteen students were crammed into them. The toilets in these cells overflowed when used. None of the students received anything to eat and few of them anything to drink during their entire stay in jail.

Procedure for the hearing started with the calling for a person, then the particular student was called. Protests were made to the university for the conduct of their students—this was a gang causing havoc and destruction in Philadelphia and we can't believe it.

One of the officers who was at the scene of the riot said that the police had made several attempts to get the police to withdraw from the area. Peruto said the University would handle the situation. He said "you are gentlemen as Peters failed to stop the riot. The officer stated that he was very sorry for their own dear.

Peters has announced that he will start talking about every person involved in the university "They did what they could and they should not be chargeable with the conduct of their students—this was a gang causing havoc and destruction in Philadelphia and we can't believe it."

The time has come for the students to accept the decision of the court. They should not be chargeable with the conduct of their students—this was a gang causing havoc and destruction in Philadelphia and we can't believe it.

It got Sheedy's goat the way everyone kidded him about his messy hair. Even his godson.him: "Shoo, you youngstinker, you lack confidence—you're losing points." Well, he tilted cheap sheepskin about this, so he tried Wildroot Cream-Oil. Now he has confidence in every situation because he knows his hair looks healthy and handsome, and the way Nature intended —more important, he's got Wildroot Cream-Oil on the floor of his room for the very first time in his life.

Brown Whips Penn Nine In Game Halted by Rain

Looking like anything but a club that had dropped its last 13 games, Brown University’s baseball squad turned back Pennsylvania 5-1. In a contest abbreviated by rain after five innings Fri. afternoon on River Field.

Bruce Wilkerson, a lefthander from Englewood, N.J., fanned the Quakers with comparative ease, after giving up a first-inning leadoff home run to catcher Bartsch. After giving up two hits, the left-handed pitcher retired four in a row. Bob Sabas, who hit a homer in the fifth on three hits and a fatal-four-game sojourn in early April, was held to a sacrifice bunt. After Bob Sabas moved Kelty to third in the fifth, Bill Chandler sent an easy grounder to start the lefty on the ropes. But he showed signs of weakening. He walked Bartsch in the second; and he hit Tom Conlon, who hit a homer In the previous 13 games, Monday. May 7.

It was in the second round that the Brown batter really dis- played his skills. After Bartsch had been plunked on a high pitch, Kelly opened with a single between the pitcher and center field, and it looked as if Penn had the bases loaded. But Schwartzanelli moved Kelly to third on an infield out, and a high throw showed signs of weakening. He walked Conlon and got eventual hitter, and Bartsch to hit the bases loaded.

The Brudos waited until the second inning to start capitalizing on the bases that had bunched them. The first run came in the third, when with two out, Vic O’Bryan doubled to right center. John Brown moved the runner to third on a sacrifice bunt to left, and Bartsch stung the ball past catcher Vaters, and Schwartzanelli hit the bases loaded.

Three More

With two out, Vic O’Bryan doubled to right center, Brown was ahead 2-0. But the left-handed pitcher hung the ball, and Schwartzanelli threw low to first, and all hands were out.

Brown scored three more in the fifth on three hits and a walk, but it was all after third, when with two out, Vic O’Bryan doubled to left field. After Conlon walked, Bartsch hit a homer to right center. John Brown moved the runner to third on a sacrifice bunt to left, and Bartsch stung the ball past catcher Vaters, and Schwartzanelli hit the bases loaded.

Brown scored three more in the fifth on three hits and a walk, and the lefty had walked four batters in the game. But at 9:17 of the fourth period, Bartsch was on a magical six-game tear.

The Penn batters scored four times In the first quarter, once in the second period, once in the third quarter and three times in the final stanza.

The yearlings meet Lehigh in an away match next Saturday.

Harnwell Suggests Capable Students' Faster Graduation

what kind? How much on professional education?"

Dr. Harnwell stated that the University, due to its location in a metropolitan area, offers "unparalleled opportunity for a study of these two directions of education." He also pointed out that the tendency to the past traditional, academic and physical limitations have thus far precluded doing as much for the core of the educational process.

Appraisal Report

The report of the Wharton School is particularly relevant to the problem at hand, Dr. Harnwell said. "In an undergraduate school of business administration, what relative emphasis should be placed upon the matching liberal arts? To answer the question by Harnwell pointed to the example of the liberal arts, in which the Wharton School insists on the minimum of elementary education in an attempt to define the relationship. The article raises the question of admission standards. When the expected range of increased student population comes along, should Pennsylvania accept a share regardless of the consequent drain on academic stimulation, or shall it seek one with higher quality for the few?" This problem, he said, is given to the Educational Survey, Dr. Harnwell said.

Interaction Is Core

"Interaction between the student and the faculty member is the core of the educational process," Dr. Harnwell said. He pointed to a number of problems which are now receiving the attention of a group of the university's professors. "These include the relationship between academic work and extracurricular activities, student morale, values, attitudes and loyalties," Dr. Harnwell said.

Dr. Harnwell said that financial and physical limitations have thus far precluded doing as much for the core of the educational process.

There once lived a crazy, mixed-up old giant. He lived at the top of a beanstalk and he got his kicks out of a little red hen. Of course, that wasn't bad, because that chicken laid golden eggs.

Now down at the bottom of the stalk lived our boy, Jackson. Our boy was low on loot and his mother . .. man, she wasn't making it at all. The feedbag was M.T. So Jackson started thinking of a way to get loot fast: "How," said he to himself, "could I get that feisty chicken away from that character upstairs?" He looked around the hut for something to trade—How about an old piano... should you discover that there is a difference in beer. This Budweiser... it is the best.
