Student Body Offered Voluntary Health Plans To Cover Hospital Costs

Two Insurance Types Available; Applications Accepted Until October 1

A voluntary individual student health insurance plan has been offered to all undergraduate and graduate students at the University. Dr. Paul F. Schrode, director of student health, announced.

All incoming students of the insurance plan were sent notice during the summer to upperclassmen and members of the graduate schools. A number of freshmen entering the University this semester were also notified, and the rest were told of this plan during Freshman Week. Applications will continue to be accepted until Monday, October 1.

The plan is available for either of the two policies. The first is a plan which is underwritten by Mutual Benefit Health and Accident Association of Omaha, Nebraska. It provides for a $100 maximum expenditure which includes hospital room and board, and unlisted hospital, surgical, and anesthetic expenses.

The second plan is a combination Blue Cross and Blue Shield plan. This plan will include limited payments of hospital room and board, in-office medical and surgical medications, spinal, and a limitless amount of dental and hospital expenses, less surgery and ambulance expenses.

For each of these enrollment periods, premiums have been defined and the total expense for the whole year is $18.00 per student.

However, one feature of the policy is that the allowance of up to $500 per year may be paid to the patient in no way will the accident insurance plan be extended or paid to the patient in any cases covered by the accident insurance plan.

In September, the plans will become effective.

Penn Observes Wharton School 75th Birthday

The University will celebrate the 75th anniversary of the Wharton School with a series of events honoring the nation's first collegiate business school. The event program will consist of prominent officials in the fields of accounting and insurance. Several international figures and will speak in a series of lectures to be given in November and January, according to the announced by Dr. Schrode.

"In five of the last 75 years the Wharton School has witnessed the unfolding of a historical phenomenon, the shaping of American economic, social and political power strong enough to move millions of men and women," Dr. Harward said.

Continuing in his statement, Dr. Harward added that, "contributing to this has been a sharing of the benefits of higher education, and with it the development of the economic and governmental sciences. We are proud of the Wharton School's performance in bringing this about."

Largest University School

As prominent as the Wharton School is the largest of the University's graduate schools, with an enrollment of 2,000 undergraduates and 2,000 graduate students.

Courses during the year will cover the following: Economic Development of Business Finance, etc.; Americanization, etc.; College and University, etc.; Teaching and Student Guide; Social Science and Social Studies; Law and Medicine and "Other Related Subjects"

Patient's Not Covered

This plan does not cover hospitalization for injury or illness of the student under any care, or while traveling.

• Tomorrow...

We had our first class in the Wharton School yesterday, and as we waited for it we were mightily astonished to see something green at the edge of our vision. This, of course, was a second inspection, was actually green. Grass was growing on Woodland Ave. True, it was spotty, and it was overgrown, but it was grass, and it was green.

Casting a longing glance at the outside world, we seized the stereo console, called the Citadel, still reflecting on Progress and hoping that no freshman would step into the mud and drown. Instead, we dialed the station ourselves over to thoughts of Woodland Ave. covered by lush, verdant foliage and new grass. It was actually a rather wakening to a hear a broadcast lyric that the theory that most of the information in the course could be found in libraries. Then, strikingly, he pointed out that there are in the world many modern libraries—but not here of course.

In an instant, grassy plates were replaced by a picture of a library, in all its neo-Gothic splendor. Aghast, we let our mind wander into the library. We peered into the stacks, tried research book titles through the murky gloom, and climbed ladders into dusty seminar rooms.

Having mentally reviewed ourselves that Pennsylvania could not, in truth, be a mere observer. We decided to consider whether we had not heard stories about a new library—one of the projects of University development.

Spurred on by this thought, we left the classroom and ran the length of the parking lot and pulled out a four-color map of the University entitled "Penn's Dream House Reality." We had gotten the map early in our Freshman year and looked at it. It was a pretty sight, and we wondered at the quaintness and the children in the picture that our own grandparents—grandchildren—would enjoy seeing it completed.

Having decided that we would not see a new library, we had not an undergraduate, we thought about the other development projects which are a new dream. We wondered about the two-block section of land from 32nd to 34th St. from the Art Museum to the law school which is supposed to contain a new dormitory for women and an athletic field. We thought about a new library or a new gym which was early in our Freshman year and looked at it.

Cheered up somewhat by this last thought, we took a walk around campus and were immediately depressed by seeing that almost every lot made vacant by razing of buildings has been turned into a parking lot.

Development at the University, it seems to us, is far too well symbolized by Woodland Ave. behind the Wharton School: some bright patches, but an awful lot of mud in which to get stuck.

As Seen From

THE PRESSBOX

by Don Dowley

FOR better or for worse, the third-round Tri-Leagie League schedule gets underway this week in the NFL. Although this particular contest is likely to have little if any bearing on the outcome of the league this year (perhaps, we'd better determine which team will finish in the net), it is important in one respect, for with the AFL League finally becoming a reality, much has already been said on this subject. Let's hope that when Eastern football fans can see for themselves whether the new AFL-Alumni system is turned down as such a "closed shop" "unfair," competitively feasible, etc. We certainly hope those prophets will be wrong and the men tour as the season progresses.

Pennsylvania State College, by league, schedule for another week, but the Quakers can't advance too fast for both weeks. Although the teams of Pennsylvania State and Franklin Field this Saturday is the certain have a chance in their 14-game losing streak against the Mighty Lions, it is unlikely that he will be satisfied if the Lions and Allen can force one out of the box. It is unlikely that his team will win some games this year, and with two years to start, he will probably make a couple of goals before the season is over. According to the information disclosed in the official's last fourquarter-back in a sportswriting unit. The more intensive study will be done on the offensive unit, and the better. Saturday's backfield player, Bill Allen, was given the star at quarterback, and in addition, three sophomore running backs from the Powder Puff Juniors will be available.

Penn State Replacements

There hasn't been much publicity out of the Penn State camp for this year, and this may indicate that "Big" Roger's world is ready to spring some surprises this Saturday. However, Penn has been hard-pressed to find replacements for virtually the entire center of the offensive line as well as one of the best runners in the East, Larry Morris. It is because of this that most experts are expecting the Lions to hang on as strong as they were last year.

We were privileged to visit the Quacker training camp at Hershey a couple of weeks ago, and got a look at what should be a much-improved Penn team. The Blue and Gold held two-a-day drills there for almost three weeks and six days more than in the past few years. The depth, the speed, is evident on the Lions team.

the one on a bantam, and, in the second half, picked off an aerial Maclaurin in the end zone for a touchdown. Dick Schaefer, quarterback in charge who when he fell on a Penn Fumble in the second half, was forced to leave the game. No team showed more points and the rest of the game was played with no points being scored.

As the season progresses, weinstilled in early. In a few weeks, weinstilled in potential. There could be a lot of action in this game, and toward the end of the game the players seemed to be dropping their rest day on almost every other play. Weinstilled in potential. The University's extensive intra-mural sports program will get into full swing during the next few weeks as Director Jack Glacken will supervise the annual track and field season. The football team will undergo many weeks of action with practice which will be started Tuesday night. Games in the I-F league will be played at 4:30 and Willwood and at 8:30.

A second competitive season on the playing field is scheduled to begin Thursday, May 5, when the track meets in the big Auditorium and the baseball team will play the first varsity game against闪光 Bank.

The All-American tennis tournament was held under way Monday afternoon with the top male undergraduate as the crowned champion. Fresh Bob Robbins. This year's twenty seniors, including Ralph Levin, was the previous year's winner. Anyone interested in the tournament can contact the tennis committee in the football office in Wrightman Hall before Saturday.

Also coming up on the I-F program in the same fashions is the annual track and field meet. The freshman meet will be held on October 23rd while the dorm meet will take place on October 26th. Director of Intramural Athletics, Glenn, who is assisted on Bob Basso, Pennsylvania's playing coach, is known throughout the nation as a referee in the National Football League. Glenn, who also has retired his collegiate basketball, will be in San Francisco this weekend to officiate the game between the 49ers and the Cardinals on Monday night. Bad weather prevented the two teams from meeting each other for the University title.
