'Scandal Sheets' Violate Privacy
by Gerald R. Becker

If one reads intellectual stimulation outside the walls of the library or classroom, it is only necessary to take a few steps away to meet the typical student on campus. On examining the writings of these enriching establishments, one will find, aside from the more popular, per- sonal, or philosophical, publications such as "Look," "The Saturday Evening Post" or "New American" Home magazines designed to appeal to the more discriminating reading, it is with one exception, the "Camping" journals that I would like to deal.

One need only examine the com- puted figure in any of our larger cities to realize that the tabloids, although often dismissed as trivial, for certainly more creative efforts. The greatest number, commonly referred to as "camps," is produced, an important factor in the success of these newspapers. The background for such a movement is, I believe, not only the desire among the younger generation for the personal words during the next few weeks. If he honestly feels that he can maintain "..." he will refrain. He honestly feels that he can maintain business as we know it today. I, is truly

Before You Leap

If spring is the time of year when a man's fancy turns to love, it is equally proper to say that in fall the college student turns his fancy to enrolling. Both romances may be short-lived.

The oft-repeated advice given by this paper in the past is a mark of the freshman into enter into extracurricular activities with extreme caution. We believe that this is sound advice. Why wonder why so few freshmen have followed it in the past.

Ground Game Stressed,
But Quakers Will Pass

Football fans for the past few years have been witness- ing less and less passing games on the gridiron, and this season promises to be no exception.

Coaches are drilling their players with the short, sure gain in mind and are relying more on the full backfield material rather than on the strong arm of a quarterback. Nevertheless, most masterminds agree that grinding out three, four and five yards at a time on the turf is better than risking a direct aerial attack which could be snared by an opposing defense.

This growing "preaching conscious" realization which has been voiced in recent years can also be found at Pennsylvania. Quaker coach Steve Soke, now in his third year at Penn after leaving Michigan State, where he helped make Jack Tatum the multiple offensive and backfield star, will continue to use this attack against young Ivy League opponents and Penn State and Navy.

Roses at QB.

However, Soke has a remarkable passing quarterback in junior Rich Rosa who proved himself last season, an agile passer along with being a solid defense performer. "The balance of veterans and newcomers should give us a more powerful offense than we have shown in the past few years," said Soke who has these assets, fine four-handoff backs, three outstanding linemen in the starting line, and Southern Junior, Frank Reilly, at right guard. Filling in until he is your veteran center Bill Auffm, and sophomores Tony Ganesa and Joe Horbeck at the tackle positions.

With spark. "The only weak spot on the team," said Soke, "appears to be the kicking. Lack of a strong man to kick." Last year's try-teacher Bob O'Shea and Joe Callahan is put with a pulling bug meeting, having the kickers missing signout to Frank Kline, Correctional Pete Klineh and Shirley Gill will sit at left guard and right end, respectively. Perhaps in the start last year, ag.

The Original Wasp engine—luned in the belly of aviation. It was actually two decades of record-breaking advancement in an effort to make a name for themselves. If they want to stick it out, we feel they will. "It looks like the foggings have their work out of them."

While he didn’t single out anyone for honors this early in the year, the Penn mentor mentioned seven local gridironers who are sure to rate in the Ivy League opposition and Penn State and Navy.

Frosh Eleven Opens Season Against JV

Football fans got their only chance to see the Pennsylvania Trojans football team in action as Freshman and JV fielded side by side last Friday where John H. Rosen’s primary task was to satisfy the hungry buds of the first frosh-jv gridiron contest at the University.

About sixty prospects turned out for first fall that week, and Butler said, "It will be up to the boys themselves. If they want to stick it out, we feel they will. It looks like the foggings have their work out of them."

What’s doing at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft

Today’s leadership...a reflection of policies established in aviation’s infancy

Back in The Roaring Twenties, the magic dream pictured American families driving in the light personal airplane as large as the family car. Among the realities, however, was a handful of men who were unabashed in their belief that the rear guard of aviation lay with bigger aircraft, higher speeds, greater ranges—all possible only through engines of higher power and more reliability than those of the era.

In the spring of 1925, six of these men of vision founded a company in Hartford to undertake the development of a new aircraft engine—an air-cooled type. The years and broadened their firm success—Pratt & Whitney Aircraft’s “Wasp.”

This talented group of men continued to improve their powerplants designed, developing engines of steadily mounting power that operated efficiently and dependably. They contributed much to aviation’s progress—so much so that currently three-quarters of the world’s commercial airliners and many of our nation’s first line military aircraft are P & W A-powered.

Today’s P & W A powerplant designs are supported by the world’s finest designers and builders of aircraft engines.
