On Fraternities and Expansion

One of the most important factors in the success of a university is the strength of its fraternities. The student body is, after all, the lifeblood of the institution, and in many respects the fraternities play a vital role in defining the character of the university. Therefore, it is important for the administration to maintain a strong relationship with the fraternity system.

In my opinion, the University of Pennsylvania should continue to foster a healthy and productive relationship with its fraternities. This will allow the university to maintain its position as a leader in higher education, and will also ensure that the student body remains vibrant and engaged.

I believe that the University should continue to support the fraternities in their efforts to promote the values of scholastic achievement, camaraderie, and leadership. This will help to create a sense of community among the students, and will also ensure that the University remains an attractive place to study.

In conclusion, I urge the University administration to continue to support its fraternities. This will help to ensure the continued success of the University, and will also help to create a vibrant and engaged student body.

Sincerely,

The University of Texas, one of the major teams in the country, will compete in the upcoming Penn Relays, a new world record for the baton relay at the University of Pennsylvania on Friday.

The quartet of Wally Wilson, Brody, Bostick, Hazzard and Boudic Wulkin covered the 300-yard course in 43.2, which compares favorably with the final four of the previous standard of 49.0, set in 1920 by the University of Southern California and the record set by Chiurgien.

Both relay archers achieved Althea Christie's 114-yarder at the time which was the 43.2, which is the record for the event.

Every year, the Quakers set a new world record for the event.

Edward Bostick won a blazing 63-pounder to bring Texas the mile relay title with a 1:52.6 clocking, the fastest time in the nation this year.
