The Gilded Cage

by Michael J. Hoffman

Philadelphia at night is many things. To most people it is a city of excitement, offering at its best in restaurants, movies, bars, and dancing clubs a snapshot of a few hours of life enjoyment after work or during breaks in a day's work. To others, it is a city of night. At night the streets turn dark, and the streets1 remain dark. It was on one of these nights that the Gilders decided they would begin their search for the Gilded Cage.

They will find five to six clubs—five, at least, of which they made certain that they were the real thing. It was a place that they could enter, and in which they could walk in on their own and without being noticed. These were the clubs that they would frequent. These were the clubs that they would frequent, and in which they would find the Gilded Cage.

"I've been there before," said Kate. "I've been there before, and I don't want to go too late at night."

"I don't want to go too late at night," said John. "I don't want to go too late at night."}

When they had had their fill of the entrance, they went on to the next part of the search. They walked to the Gilded Cage.

"The Gilded Cage is a great place," said John. "The Gilded Cage is a great place."

ROBERT M. WENTORF, JR., Ph.D., U.P.I., 1958

"Until I joined General Electric's Research Laboratory in 1951, I never realized how much my education could be put to such practical use. The job involves research in physical chemistry — the investigation of new ideas and the development of new and better products people can use. In a company like this, I have the freedom to pursue my own interests and develop new ideas. In return, I am able to contribute to the advancement of technology and science."

A physical chemist at General Electric, Dr. Robert Wentorf has contributed to the development of new materials and technologies. His work has led to advancements in industry and science.

Bryn Mawr Girls Attempt Reprisal On Haverford

by Balthas. A. Jones

A attempted penalize "wells" in Haverford by 16 Bryn Mawr students Thursday afternoon. Attempting to breach the gates of the campus as they tried to avoid a parking lot and fire alarm, 16 Bryn Mawr students were jolted to their feet.

The students were caught off guard when the Haverford campus gates were closed to them, and the group became the focus of the campus. They were ordered off the campus by a Haverford student body, however.

The girls made several telephone calls to friends of theirs at Haverford. Firemen were sent out to get the girls and take them to the Haverford's campus gates.

The boys dropped the girls off at a parking lot and left them alone to formulate their plans. They found an empty area nearby where they spent their time waiting to make their move.

Bald Started at 11:45

They started their raid at 11:45 A.M. After they spent only a few minutes being the true of the girls' group, students from John Hall, a Haverford dormitory, discovered them. They put up a battle for the others to help them stop the raid.

About 100 attended the surprise attack against the girls. As quickly as they could, the girls left campus. After two minutes of this version of the Chinese Water Torture, the Bryn Mawr girls had had enough.

Demand in Brinas Field

Dressed in Serenades shorts, and dripping wet, most of the girls were taken back to their campus in a Picks-up truck. A few of the girls, however, herded blue jeans on which became a symbol and took over the events with some Haverford boys.

Thailand Night

Presented by IH

The event was presented at International House Saturday evening. A large audience welcomed the selections followed by special re-presentations.
