Junior Week Has Long History, Rich Tradition

Junior Week, which began in 1913, is one of the oldest traditions at the Pennsylvania State College. It has a rich history and is responsible for many of the activities and traditions that are still celebrated today.

The tradition of Junior Week began in 1913, when the members of the junior class organized a week-long event to celebrate their seniority.

The event was a way for the junior class to assert their authority and to establish their place in the college community. It was also a way for the junior class to bond and become closer as a group.

In addition to the traditional activities, such as the Junior Prom and the Junior Ball, the week included a number of other events and traditions, such as the Junior Week parade and the Junior Week dance.

The Junior Prom, which is held each year, is a formal event that is a highlight of the Junior Week festivities. It is a opportunity for the junior class to come together and celebrate their seniority.

The Junior Ball, which is held on the last night of the week, is another highlight of the Junior Week festivities. It is a formal event that is open to all students and is a way for the junior class to celebrate their seniority.

Junior Week continues to be an important event at the Pennsylvania State College, and it is a way for the junior class to bond and become closer as a group.

Frosh Challenge

We, the freshmen of 1961, with appropriate fan-fish transparencies to the background, address our fellow students, who have been known to refer to us as "the Froshes."

The Froshes' policy is familiar to all of us. At the very beginning of the year, we are to be seen all over campus, not only in the Student Union, but in the dining hall, the library, the gym, and the classrooms. They are not only seen, but heard, for the Froshes are known for their loud and boisterous voices, which can be heard above the voices of the sophomores and juniors.

Sports Seminar

By Robert Schiff

As Steve Jobs, creator and architect of the all-too-humanly familiar Apple, left his seat to his right side position, Bob Marsh ran to the nearest exit, over the bridge, and down the road to the Student Union.

Barney Berlinger, a strapping blond with traditional tastes, threw a festive smile over his left shoulder from his right side position. But Bob had remained on the sidelines; the last thing he wanted was to be associated with the Froshes. "It's a little too early, isn't it?" he thought. "I've got to get out of here before they all start leaving." But Steve had his heart set on making the show, and he was determined to do it.

The weakness of his body was proven when he had to carry his own bag, which was too heavy for his frame, and when he fell and hit his head. But, despite his shortcomings, he had been proving that he was more human than most of us, and there can be no doubt that in this case he was right.

Among the many new arrivals were two sophomores and three freshmen, each with their own ideas and opinions. But there were no major changes in the Sophomore Class, and we were practically the same as we were last year.

In any case, we were still students, and the main thing was to enjoy ourselves. The Froshes were not to be taken seriously, and we should not let them make us feel inferior. We should enjoy our time here, and forget about the future.

The Bailout Plan

By Robert Schiff

The Bailout Plan, a plan to save the nation from the current economic crisis, has been proposed by a group of students. The plan involves the creation of a new currency, the "Bailout Dollar," which would be used to purchase goods and services. The plan has been met with mixed reactions, with some students supporting it and others opposed. But the plan's proponents believe that it is the only way to save the nation from the current crisis.

There Must Be A Reason

There are many reasons why young people who work at General Electric are attracted to the company. One reason is the challenging opportunity open to young people here. My field is guided-missile research, which is the nation's top-priority job. The work is done in the scope of the company. I've had the opportunity to work with technical experts in many related fields. And I've seen firsthand the responsibility which General Electric places on younger men — proof to me that in a big company a young man can get to tackle big jobs.

The research being done by Dr. Yusuf A. Yoler is significant not only to himself, but to General Electric and the security of the nation as well. Al-}
