Back in the days when Temple used to park the scrimmage at Convention Hall, one could watch down-town. The team would usually be at University on a rainy Saturday afternoon, meaning that they would be spending the afternoon pacing off the minute or two they had been practicing. The result was always a taut, taut game of football. This year I felt a relief that the team would not be forced to play a game like this.

The weather was perfect for a game of football, and the team seemed to be in good form. The first half was a close game, with both teams vying for the upper hand. The second half was a bit more lopsided, with Temple in the lead. The final score was 10-7, Temple in front.

In the end, it was a great game of football, and I hope that Temple will continue to have the same success in the future.

Quakers Work on Passing

Pennsylvania went through two heavy practice sessions over the weekend preparing for its Thanksgiving game with Cornell at Franklin Field.

The Quakers, who have completed only 34 passes to 94 attempts worked on their aerial attack as well as their defense which has also been a Penn weak spot this year. The Quakers have allowed 41 passes to be completed against them in six Ivy League games.

Steve Sebo said that despite the fact that the Quakers have a one leg advantage they haven't been able to work out on Wednesday. Dennis Trenchard has been moved back into the starting lineup for the Cornell game. He will sail the car in the starting lineup and should be able to play on Saturday.

both of those points with this year's team. We had a good two weeks of practice and we have some excellent prospects for next year's varsity.

Tomaric singled out Larry Forte for his work in the quarterback slot. "Plainly he has a top chance for the quarter back position for the varsity. He showed us a new system and played valuable experiences playing football against area schools. But most important of all was winning on the bench for the varsity," he said.
