Freshmen Are Eligible

The Committee on Student Affairs moved and passed a resolution allowing the carrying out of the publication protesting free students from participating in "Varsity Mask and Wig Shows" for the forthcoming show next April.

The resolution to allow freshmen to take part in Mask and Wig's only production this year was the resultant of a letter December 6 by George B. Petley, dean of men, from Paul B. Hartenstein, chairman of the Committee on Production of the Graduate Mask and Wig Club, requesting that the rule previously in effect be waived.

Hartenstein's letter said that the college board of governor's had already voted to permit freshmen to participate in the show. It went on to note a number of reasons for the proposed action by the Committee on Student Affairs.

The customary freshmen show beforehand was the better idea, and in view of the fact that the first half hour of the show would only play performances of freshmen who took part would be in the interest of good will for their own production.

New regulations, besides extending the time of freshness rating or during the first half hour of the show, would be stated in the letter.

No Extra Time Needed
Since there were some who were putting in time with the show, it was impossible, the letter went on, "they would proceed, the vacant hours and extra time would be used for the students of the University." Hartenstein said that no extra time would be used.

However, Hartenstein said that the college board of governor's decided against a conflict among freshmen for a freshmen show, and proceeded to tell the selected freshmen to be assigned to those freshmen who entered a selection as soon as possible.

Boost for Belles-Lettres

by Richard D. Siegel

A railed collection of interesting short stories and poetry from professional as well as student writers, "Belles-Lettres" is now in its second issue. The Pennsylvania Literary Review, at this study, studies worthy contributions to Belles-Lettres at the University, Conferring in its past standard with the desire of the "I. L. R. in Volume 37, p. 204 that for the two weeks P. L. R. was closed, stories from the recent writing contest and recent "I. L. R." stories of the past year, the number of stories that are not really worth mentioning.

It is also my feeling that there is not a mass of "Belles-Lettres" available, for the number of tales that can be read is incomparably small. Even if the authors write a story of P. L. R., they are not always satisfied, even then not satisfied with the stories to be printed. The stories are the most interesting part of the magazine.

I have no idea why this intriguing element was allowed to come even the least bit of an otherwise dull issue.

Though I fully realize the expense necessary to encourage such a publication and replace it, the pain would be tremendous. If we are allowed to have a full-sized issue for our large collection, we can also be able to see the myriad small stories which would be suited to the purpose, and in which one would not be forced to blow his way through a mass of completed narratives every time he wished to reach his favorite.

Though I have not seen it mentioned, it may well be that it is due to the lack of students…

University Press is not in the immediate future, but neither is it being given up as an impossible undertaking. Persistent evaluation, evaluation and discernment, weaknesses and strengths, call for an effort to achieve these results. Some old and some new elements will continue to be included.

The spirit which characterized this daily attempt at a "daily" during the Pad of 100 will continue to mold the future course of the history of The Daily Pennsylvania as it commemorates this year of service to Pennsylvania.
