Wang Fails To Prove Points, Leaves Audience Of 800 in Quandry

Wang's Arguments Are Contradictory During Attempt To Describe His Beliefs

by Steven D. Irvis

David R. Wang, pronounced "Wong," came to Pennsylvania last night and, amid a mass of contradictions and cir-convocation of questions, denounced everything from seg-aggregation to communism. The assault was relentless, in turn to criticize what Wang believed, to negate his contradictions, and to

"I was talking about the abstract concepts of the human soul," Wang explained to a reporter. "But I don't really want to talk about it."

Wang's speech was met with a standing ovation from the audience.

Five Seniors Get Awards of Merit

An address by Henry R. Luce, editor-in-chief of Time, Inc., publications, will highlight the annual meeting of the General Alumni Society tomorrow at 2 p.m. in the Houston Hall Auditorium.

Following the luncheon meeting will be the official ceremonies turning Woodland Avenue, from 36th to 38th Streets, over to the University and closing the street to regular traffic. After the ceremonies, a formal reception in the Houston Hall Auditory will be held at 12:30 p.m.

At the afternoon meeting, which students as well as alumni may attend, the General Alumni Society will present Student Awards of Merit to those men and women who have demonstrated the highest credentials for their leadership in undergraduate work and activities.

Ten alumni will also receive certificates for their outstanding service to the University.

Undergraduate recipients of the Student Awards of Merit include: Min K. Liu, chairman of the freshman class; Bertram Yan, president of the Student Senate; Edward A. Lee, president of the Quill and Scroll; E. A. Cue, president of the Warden of the Alumni Society; and R. C. Wang, president of the Alumni Society.

The officers who run the University also will be honored.

The Board of Trustees will meet throughout the afternoon, and the annual meeting of the General Alumni Society will be held.

Quaker Five Faces Brown, Yale in Ivy League Games

By Paul Kern

Peterson's varsity quintet's aim of a first division finish in the Ivy League will receive a severe test this weekend when the Quakers face defending champions Yale tonight and Brown Sunday in a two-game trip through New England.

The Quakers have dropped their last three decisions and have an overall 2-2 record, including 1-1 at home in Princeton, against the Ivy League games.

Unofficial Closing Day

The Philadelphia Police Department will erect a barrier at the 36th Street entrance to Woodland Avenue this morning at 9 in order to prevent fans from entering the area. The Ivy League authorities will then conduct a formal ceremony at the 36th Street entrance.

The Quakers will play Yale at 2 p.m. and Brown at 4 p.m. today.

Two hundred and eighteen years of its existence will be celebrated by the University of Pennsylvania on Founder's Day. It is therefore necessary that the students take a step in the direction of making the event of this year's Founder's Day as gratifying and inspiring to the student body as that of any other that has preceded it. The celebration will be held in the University's classroom, with the attendance of the students and faculty.

The celebration will be marked by the following events:

1. The gathering of the students and faculty in the classroom at 10:00 a.m.
2. The reading of the address by the principal, Mr. Benjamin Franklin, to the students.
3. The presentation of the Founder's Day Address by the President of the University.
4. The distribution of the Founder's Day Medals to the students.
5. The singing of the National Anthem.
6. The presentation of the Founder's Day Prize to the outstanding student of the year.

The celebration will be concluded with a reception for the students and faculty in the University's classroom.

The Founder

The first Founder of the University was Benjamin Franklin, who was born in Boston, Massachusetts, on January 17, 1706. He was a member of the Society of Friends, and was educated at the University of Pennsylvania. He was a member of the Continental Congress, and was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He was also a contemporary of the great statesmen of his day, including George Washington and Thomas Jefferson.

Mr. Franklin was a man of many talents, and was a great admirer of the arts and sciences. He was a great inventor, and is credited with the invention of the lightning rod. He was also a great writer, and is credited with the invention of the Franklin stove. He was a great statesman, and was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

He died on April 17, 1790, and is buried in Boston, Massachusetts. His memory is preserved by the Founder's Day celebration, and by the Founder's Day Address, which is read each year on Founder's Day.

The Founder's Day Address is read by the President of the University, who is selected by the students and faculty. The address is a reflection on the history of the University, and is a tribute to the Founder, Benjamin Franklin.
