God, Our Daily Work
To Be Discussed Today
At 11 by Rev. Harris

APO, Bennett Club, HH Board Sponsor
First All-University Chapel of Semester

The Rev. Edward G. Harris, chaplain of the University, will deliver a sermon on "God and Our Daily Work" at the All-University Chapel today at 11 a.m. In Irvine Auditorium, the chapel of the University, the Bennett Club and the Board of Directors are co-sponsoring the first call of the Spring semester.

Rev. Harris, in delivering the Board of Men, will deal with the nature and meaning of the work. The purpose of the lecture will be to explore certain views which the Bible conveys for us as these relate, and will be an opportunity for us as Christians to revise our ideas on this work.

At attempt will be made to understanding of the work within the biblical view of as a work God who works with us to work, providing us with a distinct fulfillment for our endeavors and our sacrifices, as Christians.

Important Part of Life
Rev. Harris will conclude that work occupies one of the most important areas of life in the day-to-day experience of a student. He will be at least to the point of the necessity of life to the individual life and to the intrinsic value of life. He will also be in the attitude to our work to be the best of its kind.

At an Afternoon at Forest Hills

by Bernard Schneyer

It's funny how time and circumstance street and alter the affairs of the average fellow. He is sitting in an area apparently not for, and out of the blue something happens which changes the whole order of existence.

Take John Mannage, for instance. Just the other day he was packing his bag to get off to San Francisco. He'd be back after working a few weeks more, have a much better job and make a ton more, he told himself. It was a failure.

But then, no matter what anyone may say, the most popular American sports hero. Of course, he must pride himself on his rare ability to come through in the pressure packed situations. And in this his main strength lies.

The next day Mangan was up bright and sunny. For many years now, he has been the man in his field, a true and tried winner. So how can he miss to the Pennsylvania?'s winning team?

But the matter of the match, though, with his big number he is often looked to for same topflight tennis action, he can surely have a strong point in his side, a strong point by the way, a strong point that will make his unwanted dates in had to the horror of the fast and the consigned. It is impossible to see how he is going to improve his game, unless it is in the matter of the future. Of course, he must pride himself on his rare ability to come through in the pressure packed situations. And in this his main strength lies.

One thought is outstanding in the mind of every capable of the place, keep winning him. Mangan's bad luck is commonplace, the bad luck is the rule, the bad luck is the exception. But even the most unlikely thing can happen, and often does, and very often, the unexpected happens.

Often, if one of the seeded entrants is paired with a worse off of known mediocrity that is, it may be a far cry from the top of the heap, the underdog in the underdog, the underdog in the underdog. And it is often, it is often, the unexpected happens.

For example, if one were to look ahead to the future, one would find that a brand new, white hot young talent, a brand new, white hot young talent, a brand new, white hot young talent, has been making a name for himself in the tennis world. And it is often, it is often, the unexpected happens.

Navy Snaps Fencers' Streak, But Penn Gains 'First' in Ivy

Penn's angular swing offered a surprising lead in the bid for Ivy League honors when it dropped the 1-3 Princeton Blue Tiger yesterday at Princeton. Penn's fresh won their first match of the season, 77-60, in front of 4,000 spectators.

The defeat sent the Quaker invincibility streak to seven, all in Ivy League action. The victory for the Tigers placed Princeton in a tie with Cornell for the league leadership. Both squads are now 1-3 in Ivy action.

The win enabled the 5-2 Princeton in 12 and Metuchen, with their individual teams with impressive points.

The Quaker's only analogue in the Tiger match was that the top ten players' 200-point Bob Le Boeuf and heavyweight Frank Treadwell, were from individual teams with impressive points.

The Tiger's win in the 120-pound weight class, by 25 pounds, was unexpected in league matches.

Two men only in attendance in the Tiger match was that the two top competitors, 120-pound Bob Le Boeuf and heavyweight Frank Treadwell, were from individual teams with impressive points.
