"Jockey brand underwear made me a brighter star!"

"You can't play Cyrano if you wear baggy underwear!" the drama coach told me. That was the day I bought my first pair of Jockey briefs. Quel fit! Quel comfort! I looked better and, surprisingly, even my superb acting improved. Jockey briefs had made a dramatic change in my career! Jockey briefs are the most copied underwear in the world. Be sure you get genuine Jockey brand—signed to the attention of the student body.

Note: You may substitute a similar brief, if you wish; the point is simply that it is important to wear genuine Jockey underwear. Note: You may substitute a similar brief, if you wish; the point is simply that it is important to wear genuine Jockey underwear.

"A company that plans far ahead gives me the chance to work out my future"

"Pleasing design is no accident," says 52-year-old TV set designer Richard Montmeat. "It takes creative planning. At General Electric, we're constantly developing new product designs — including some for products which won't be on the market for several years. Ever since joining General Electric, I've had the opportunity and challenge of working toward the designs of the future. As I see it, a company which plans ahead gives me the chance to work out my own future, too."

The creative accomplishments of Richard Montmeat have already brought him widespread recognition. He was awarded design patents in 1950 and 1955; he won the Industrial Designers Institute Award in 1955; and his design for the 1956 General Electric 17-inch portable television receiver was selected for showing in an international design exposition in Milan, Italy.

Progress in pleasing design — making appliances more enjoyable to own and use — is an important factor in our nation's growing use of electricity and in our constantly rising level of living. Planning now to satisfy future customers is important not only to the continued growth of the electrical industry, but to individual progress as well. Opportunity for long-range planning is part of the climate for self-development which is provided for General Electric's more than 29,000 college-graduate employees.
