Penn Oarsmen Top Princeton; Take 7 Races

By Alan S. White

Spurred on by the musical chorus of supporters, the Penn Oarsmen's rowers put on a splendid performance over the Princeton oarsmen on the banks of the Schuylkill River as they completed their first race of the season in the 1928 Cup.

The competition was held on the campus of Princeton University, where the atmosphere was electric as the races were witnessed by a huge crowd.

* A Social Problem

For years we have heard warnings of the dangers lurking in the streets of the West Philadelphi*a "jungle." Women have been attacked and beaten in their homes and in their stores; and in such places as a senior and his wife are attacked by armed robbers in their apartment.

Last Friday a graduate student was mugged and nearly died of exposure while seeking money for a dance. We write this not remotely for these crusades, wanton attacks, butting heads and melodramas. We write this because we feel that the University's action in regard to the students who are the prey of these crimes has failed. The University has not informed the students themselves of the actual situation. We have only expressed our desire that the University improve the safety of campus. If we are wrong, we are wrong because we love the University. If we are right, we will fulfill our purpose.

University officials must do more than ever before, turn their development plan to ward off such attacks. The city's adequate housing facilities—on-campus and off-campus—should be sufficient for students to live in outside lodgings.

The City of Philadelphia was asked last month to increase police protection in West Philadelphia. This is the same request that has been made by residents in all sections of the City. It is a request that seems almost impossible to fulfill. But the problem is deeper than mere additions to the police force. It is a situation that affects the safety of all of us.

Today, Federal govern- ment is spending millions for defense and thousands for social welfare. Highways are important, but clean, clear, educational and recreational facilities, are more so. What are we doing to help the city's underprivileged neighborhoods?

The Department of Commerce, with the help of the federal government, is conducting a survey of job opportunities. The study will be completed within the next two years. The results will be used to plan the future development of the city. The survey will help to identify the areas that need the most attention.

Modern Track Missiles

by Robert L. Israeloff

Modern track missiles (MTMs) have been developed by the U.S. Army to improve the accuracy and effectiveness of ground-to-ground and ground-to-air attacks. MTMs are designed to engage and destroy enemy targets with high precision and minimal collateral damage.

Varsity Club Plans No Aid for Icemen

In a letter to President Frey of the Graduate Auxiliary Club, told the daily Pennsylvania yesterday that the Graduate Auxiliary Club has no immediate plans to operate the substitute hockey club, that but should it be advised to, he feels "we would be perfectly willing to help in any way we can.

In answer to a reporter appearing in one of the downtown newspapers, Brickley emphasized that they do not request the funds for backing. If such a request were made, it would be entertained by the Graduate Auxiliary Club.

Last year the Graduate Auxiliary Club voted in favor of backing the hockey team financially and was also willing to do so this year. However, the team never asked the Club for aid and get all their funds from private sources.

In view of the fact that the Club feels willing to help the team last year, Mr. Brickley feels that they would want to see such action.

However, said he, that the money would be used in the hockey club.

Since they make a request and the hockey club is "aim to train to the best of the way," the Club could then consider such a move.

The hockey club was formed two years ago by Ben Grosh, after it was favored for a home game and Penn met with immediate approval by the students.

In their first year at varsity, the hockey team was successful and only just defeated this year.
