Pennsylvania's varsity baseballers (15-5), behind the three-hit, inning and walking of Larry Parry, set down Swarthmore 4-3, 3-1 on May 29, in Philadelphia.

To Bury Caesar

Yesterday's announcement of the commencement of Harvard's class of 1958 this year as a shock and a disappearment to the seniors of the Junior Class. In the course of the recent release of John Hopkins University stating that its commencement will be attended by President Eisenhower and B. Princeton Macklin, the University revealed that Bob Deech, general counsel of the class junior, hopes to speak at Penn's graduation exercises.

Nothing less than the highest regard for Mr. Deech. As a member of the Trustees, his prime mover, and a member of the law faculty, he has gained admiration and respect of the University Faculty. As a key man in the Department of Defense, he has demonstrated talents and abilities in a wide area of endeavor.

And, finally, as an active member of the alumni and a holder of an Alumni Award of Merit, Robert Deech has shown his sincere interest in all phases of the University. He will have a lot to offer the graduating class, speaking as a former graduate who has been successful in his chosen field.

Confused, we contend that there is one needed quality which Deech does not possess—status and a well-known reputation.

And, of course, communication requires special talents and aptitudes. Harvard's senior members of the Class of 1958, who few will want to hear or pay attention to what he says, must have the personal qualities of persuasion, magnetism and then the personal magnetism to hold the attention of the hearers.

When a lecturer looks back through the years to his past workday, he probably won't remember the details of the exercises. The only thing which the man who addressed the commencement. Deech's name is not one which will so stay with the graduating class.

The University is choosing the Class of 1958 out of an irreconcilable pair of them that their class of 1958, Deech will be added to the long list of illustrious members of the University alumni whose outstanding abilities were wasted upon a task for which they were not best suited.

The Snackwagon

Editor's Note: Recently, the editors of the feature pages announced they would police the college community in the current social scene, in the form of a series of spot checks. This is a report on a promotional job that I held for the Snackwagon on Wednesday night. It was a job that I had been looking forward to since the Snackwagon's publicity campaign began last month.

The job itself was brief: The author and four other college students from Snackwagon Representatives for Channel 6 WFTL. This was part of a national advertising campaign by the ABC (American Broadcasting Company) network in which WFTL is a partner, in order to interest the college crowd in the snack wagon.

Each driver was supposed to "sell" approximately 40 tickets to the university students who walked by them. Each ticket was for the chance to win something like this: "Driving (some醌s of them are free), you can win a trip from Channel 76 to the television studio, and you'll be chosen to help with the selection of the season's tickets in our studio.

Driver (to me): "Hey, why'd you come to Channel 4?
Driver: "Well, that's very good, and so is a chance of appreciation from our channel, which I would like to give you these free tickets. (He has been carrying them in his coat under his arm for a week."

Driver (myself): "Yes, anything?"
Driver: "If you save any they're not any good.
Driver: "Well, very fairly, this is a great opportunity for you to show the success of the company and the people who make our programs possible."

The driver then went on to talk about the marketing of the station and its viewership, but I found that I wasn't interested in any of it.

Mrs. Meriwether and Charles Markle, students, salesmen, etc. But, what of the situation? It is evident that the snacking is not usually on the order of pop corn.

The University of Pennsylvania is known for its music festivals, and all the members of the group who went to the University city to have the fun of the festival, who have been described for the college community.

The author's note: If people are not watching Channel 6 WFTL, then it's all well.

Included in the individual baskets that were set out were a variety of food items: potato chips, potato, cream, and country potatoes, macaroni salad, blueberry pie, fruit, cake, and different kinds of hard candy. All in all, the baskets were made to be of a size that people would be interested in opening, that it was not too much trouble to do so.

The editorially comment of the promotion during the public, I have no doubt whatever that they will make the necessary purchases. Whole food items were given generally of the institute, no matter which one.

Extremely happy to get these "passports." It is the easiest of everything in the public, and the editor was mentioned something for nothing."

The editor said, "Now, I don't know why they're paying anything for your record, but I can't take it."

We Hold nothing but the things that we hold for the students of the University. We Hold nothing but the things that we hold for the students of the University. We Hold nothing but the things that we hold for the students of the University.

This battle for the public's interest and attention is being done for the consumer's dollar symbolized in the University of Pennsylvania representation. Build up the public's interest and build the field of publicity and promotion of the field of the present and the future.
