Great Expectations

Last night's meeting of fraternity presidents, under the patronage of the Interfraternity Council showed great promise of developing into a really important meeting for the campus.

The atmosphere at the meeting was one of constructive effort to tackle and solve some of the pressing problems which fraternity men at Penn share. Free discussion between the leaders of each house, both formally and in informal groups, provided a new basis for understanding between houses.

A strong fraternity system is one of the backbone of our university life. Keeping it strong, and unified is one of the jobs the Interfraternity Council has to perform if it wishes to accomplish success in their endeavor.

Quakers Booters Ready For League Inaugural

Penn-Dartmouth
Princeton-Columbia

Whod-done-it in the 3rd quarter was the story of the game. The Quakers had been trailing by a point and they could go all the way, and from the looks of the scoreboard and the final, this game, it's just plain wild.
