Women’s Gov’t Wants Change In Honor Code

by Julius D. Yoseff

The battle for women’s rights on campus is being waged again in connection with proposed changes in the Honor Code.

Specifically, women students are asking more freedom in the same conditions under which they may violate rules. The rules, contained in the Hand- Book for Women Residents, other- wise known as the House Bible, are felt to be overly strict.

Also, women students believe that the visiting hours would also affect male students since the dean’s office would take bilateral action regarding any offense.

According to Ralph T. Thompson, assistant to the dean of men, his office is seeking to make the winning a struggle con- ducted by the WSGA before taking the matter to the WVGA.

Women’s View Expressed

The women’s point of view was expressed last night by Norma Wegg, president of the Women’s House Council, at a meeting of the Committee on Honor Code.

The meeting, which was also attended by Maxine E. Edmonds, Robert W. McCafferty and Richard E. Finerman, reached no conclusions.

Disapproved Expected

Many women students felt that the Honor Code now under con- sideration by the WVGA Senate will be approved as shown by the present rules regarding hours re- quired since they do not feel fully bound to obey the House Sys- tem rules now in effect.

The All Residents Council and the WSGA will present proposed changes in the rules at the next meeting of the CAB to be held this week.

The present rules were adopted a year ago. At that time, women students were not allowed to use the House's facilities under any cir- cumstances.

Editorial

• An Immediate Need

Probably the most important factor which has affected the University's growth during the past few years has been the lack of financial support. This has been recognized by the administration with respect to the enrollment of women students, and is being rectified by a building program which will give Pennsylvania one of the finest systems of women's dormitories.

Similar plans have now been announced for consideration to house 1600 undergraduates and 800 graduate men, but either is a major step toward eliminating two of the most serious problems which plague the University—the large number of non-resident students and the also large number living in non-approved housing, i.e., apartments and rooming houses.

But more significant is the proposed structure and design of these dormitories. College-like units of 200 students are being considered, comparable to those at Harvard and Yale.

The advantage of such a system are easily seen. Rather than appearing as a massive, impersonal complex, the dormitories will be individualized.

The University’s proposed plans are wisely not designed to physically incorporate the faculty within the halls of learning, but rather to provide space so that as few houses as possible will have to be removed. Recognition of the desirability of residential communities is implicit in the plans, for even with the additional capacity, the dormitories will have to be supported by the fraternity houses in order to accommodate the entire male undergraduate body. In view of proposed increases in residence halls, however, inter-sorority fraternity houses and the separate dormitory buildings will better serve to integrate the student body and will break down the isolated atmosphere of the dormitories.

The importance of immediate action should be apparent. Experience with other projects shows that even at best it takes a long period of time to bring about a development of such magnitude. If the project is to be successful, it must advance beyond the thought stage before other plans, involving relocation of fraternity houses, the new Humanities Building, the new School of Education, etc., are begun, so that the dormitory project will not be restricted in scope or completeness. The new dormitories are needed to take Pennsylvania a unified university. We urge that no time be lost.

Latin American Turmoil

Yankee, Go Home!

(Edward’s Note): The following article was written by a Latine American citizen, an undergraduate at the University of Puerto Rico, and is reprinted with the permission of Paul Wehrley’s Fidel Castro article in yesterday’s Bellagio Hangover. We are prepared to emphasize latitude in relations in a Latin American country under a dictatorship, he seeks to remain conservative.

The “Yankee, go home” attitude is more prevalent in Latin America today than many U.S. officials are willing to admit. Americans, however, should not jump to the conclusion that this is just as inevitable consequence of the power and might of that country. Blunders in this country’s foreign policy towards Latin America are partly responsible for this latter anti-Americanism and no single U.S. policy has contributed more to this feeling than that of open support by the United States of the few remaining military dictatorships in the Western Hemisphere.

This support of Latin American tyrants takes the form of shipment of arms, granting of loans, and public praise by high officials in the American government of the conduct of dictators and of the program and order” achieved by their regimes.

The attitude of the American government is based on the idea that military dictatorships are better for circumstances than the instability and irresponsibility of those governments that attempt to establish a democratic process. Dictators do not permit communists to move freely and this is a point it is urged, that the dictators are all very anti-communists. As a consequence, those who vote to overthrow dictators are usually considered communists.

To those with any knowledge of the social process and the very real problems of Latin America, it will be quite apparent why this attitude is not only short-sighted but more important helps to destroy the cause of communism than to deter its progress. Let us explain exactly overthrown.

Latin America is developing economically; it is undergoing an industrial revolution. A revolution of this type is inevitably accompanied by the rise of a new social character. This social change has resulted in changes in class relationships and this shift has brought about a yearning for political democracy. Power over the state is possessed by the land holding arbitrary to urban middle and working classes.

It is this social change that the communists in Latin America have tried to exploit by attempting to depict themselves as supporters of democracy. A military dictatorship helps the communists on two counts: Using their clever policy of“democratic” communism, communists will first allow one branch of their organization to collaborate with the dictator who, lacking for civilian support, will welcome their cooperation. A second wing of the communist’s apparatus, taking a position of opposition to the dictatorship, will inevitably be thrown into the company of the democratic parties which are also fighting the tyranny. Thus communist benefited with the dictators in power have influence in his regime, and they benefit also when he falls when they are gloried for having restored democracy.

Apparent U.S. support of the military dictator-

Dear Daily Pennsylvanian:

Yesterdays editorial, " administered by the community's ample store to serve its fellows in any capacity (who will later use power) that the U.S. is not responsible for the tyranny they suffer.

In sum, three avenues in Latin America are open to those who are trying, in a democratic manner, to bring about the social revolution. The communists, who are not only American, but those groups that are trying, in a democratic manner, to bring about the social revolution. The communists are capable of putting in a serious debate of their own in America, where there is no organized labor movement. The communists are capable of making decisions in a democratic manner, and when we come to question the decided by our officials are not being patriotic, but are more patriotic in their conviction that the Daily Pennsylvanian and the need to apologize for investigating this political case. Maybe if the administration of the university would submit to the military (our campus authorities being ROTC) for censorship, the problem of apologies would cease and your efforts could be turned to matters of greater significance for Penn students and the world such as a citywide campaign to legalize low-cost housing.

Penn Sends Four Swimmers To Easterns At New Haven

by Richard Rynas

A four-man contingent of Joe Wakeley, Fred Nocester, Fred Fox and John Settlemeyer Penn in the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming League Championships to be held today, tomorrow and Saturday at the Yale Natatorium in New Haven, Conn.

Although none of the Quakers are favored in their respective events, each is optimistic that each of his opponents will be in the thick of contention. Campbell stated he certainly would not send the men to Yale if he did not think that they would win.

Each of the three swimmers will participate in at least two of the 100-yard and 200-yard breaststroke races, and the 200-yard individual medley relay. Throughout the season Wakeley has registered an impressive record of 15 victories and three losses, and is considered to be the best swimmer in the country.

Joe Wakeley is the only swimmer to beat the Red and Blue men this season, however, was feeling the effects of the long trip to Hanover during the contest.

Nocester will swim in the 100-yard and 200-yard breaststroke races, and the 200-yard individual medley relay. He will also be a member of the 400-yard freestyle relay.

Fred Fox's only entry to compete in last season's EISL, Fox, will be entered in the 1-meter and 1-meter events. Last year Fox finished seventh in the 1-meter competition.

Swimming in the 100-yard and 200-yard breaststroke races, and the 200-yard individual medley relay, Nocester will be attempting to go down in the record. He registered the third-best time of the season in the Penn-Army meet.

Of the 29 teams participating in Cornell Wrestlers Favored To Win EIWA Championship

by Harvey Stein

Haviland captures its third straight Ivy League wrestling title and is favored to do so by dual meet streak of 13 in a row. Cornell will try for its second consecutive Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling championship tomorrow at the Ithaca Red/Barton Hall.

Cornell will have an easy time as they did last year; they did not have to go to the school group at Pittsburgh. Leibigh, Boston, and a few other states are expected to give Cornell a battle for the team title.

With four champions defending their crowns along with two NCAA champions and a 1957 EIWA winner, the road will be tough for the others, who will finish it a few months from now.

Cornell's "Matt-and-Jeff" champions, 123-pound Dave Auville and heavyweight Dave Dunlap will look for their second straight crowns in their events. However, if the Big Red are to repeat as champions they must not expect from George Willis, Steve Friedman, and Bill O'Brien the same problems.

Auville's defending second for the Big Red at 157 in last year's tournament.

Auville's chief competition will come from Pitt's Paul Powell, who did so much in his first tournament, but did capture the NCAA crown at 147 pounds. Paul should give Auville a tough match.

Steve Friedman's second place will be Syntax's 157 pound Art Baker, who placed third at Wakefield at last meet. Yale's Dick Sherrill is another top contender.

Leibigh's Rick Stack will lead the 141-pounders in the meet. Both Halli of the Panthers and Har-

HUSBANDS, ANYONE?

It has been alleged that coeds go to college for the sole purpose of finding husbands. This is, of course, an infamous canard, and I give fair warning that small and sappy as I am; anybody who says such a distastily thing when I am around had better be prepared for a sound thrashing.

Girls go to college for precisely the same reasons as men go to broaden their horizons, to lengthen their vistas, to drink at the font of wisdom. But if, by pure chance, while a girl is engaged in these needful pursuits, a likely looking fellow should pop into view, why, what’s wrong with that? Eh? What’s wrong with that?

The question now arises. What should a girl look for in a husband? A great deal has been written on this subject. Some say character is most important, some say background, some say appearance, some say education. All are wrong.

The most important thing—and none—in a husband is health. Though he be handsome as Apollo and rich as Oceana, what good is he if he just lies around all day accruing babies?

THE MOST IMPORTANT THINGS IN A HUSBAND IS HEALTH

I

The very first thing to do upon meeting a man is to make sure he is sound of mind and heart. Before he has a chance to sweet-talk you, slap a thermometer in his mouth, roll back his eyelids, yank out his tongue, tug on his testicles, palpate his stomach, ask him to straighten up and kiss his mouth. If he fails these simple tests, phone for an ambulance and go on to the next prospect.

If, however, he turns out to be physically fit, proceed to the second most important requirement in a husband. I refer to a sense of humor.

A man who can’t take a joke is a man to be avoided. There are several simple tests to find out whether your prospect can take a joke or not. You can, for example, slash his tires. Or burn his "Mad" mohair. Or steal his snuff, or turn his pet raccoon. Or shave his beard.

Because of these good-natured pranks, laugh gaily and shout "April Fool!" if he replies, "But this is February, too!" or something equally Thorugh, cross him off your list and give thanks you found out in time.

But if he laughs silently and calls you "Little minx!" put him in the next test. Find out whether he is kindly.

The quickest way to ascertain his kindliness is, if, for example, to look at the cigarette he smokes. Is it mild? Is it elemen? Is it human? Does it remind readsy to the petals? Does it coddle the synapses? Is it a good companion? Is it genteel? Is it bright and friendly and full of dulce pleure from cocksure till the heart of darkness?

Is it, in short, Philip Morris? If Philip Morris it be, then step the man to your lesson with hopes of steel, for you may be sure that he is kindly as a summer breeze, kindly as a mother’s kiss, kindly like the very never.

And now, having found a man who is kindly and healthy and blessed with a sense of humor, the only thing that remains is to make sure he will always wear a handsome coat. That, fortunately, is easy. Just remind him in engineering.

(Blow the Author of "Round the Flag, Boys!" and, "Blowford Boy with Cheek.")

For older smokers the Philip Morris Company makes Marl¬ bors, the cigarette with better "makin’s." You improved filter and good rich flavor. Soft pack or flip-top box. A lot to like!
