Mackey, Ryan, Murgo, Are Selected As Other Leaders For '59-'60 Season

by R. Joseph Fuchs

Joseph P. Murgo was elected as the president of Newman Club for the 1959-60 academic year. Murgo leads a slate of five officers followed by Loretta Caceci, vice president; Philip E. Mackey, vice president of external affairs; Peter J. Ryan, treasurer, and Marcia L. Morgen, secretary.

The installation of the new officers, according to custom, takes place in two ceremonies. The first was the religious ceremony which took place last night at 7 p.m. in St. Ignatius Chapel, and was presided over by the Rev. James J. Murphy, Chaplain. The second is the formal Installation of the officers over the outgoing officers, and will take place during the regular meeting this afternoon at 4 at Newman Hall.

The office of vice president of intercollegiate affairs is a newly created position this year, which was adopted in a constitutional amendment by the Club. The main duties detailed in this office are the director of student activities, and the co-ordination of the various committees, the main classification being religious, educational and social.

The total number of ballots cast was 111 out of a total membership of approximately 300. This was the largest number of people who have voted in an election in the past few years.

Murgo has stated his main objective to be the expansion of the educational area of the Club. He will submit the two discussion groups per week, and the seminars which are presently being conducted on a one class per week basis.

Also planned are major revisions in the social activities of the Club with special emphasis on the newly formed Sunday night dances.

The Daily Pennsylvanian
A Franklin Society Publication

Vol. LXXII MARCH 19, 1959

Richard E. Pomerle, outgoing editor-in-chief of The Daily Pennsylvanian, presents the key to the editor's office, symbolic of the position, to his successor, Paul Weinberg.

At The Barclay

"Touché, varlet," cried Altos, skewering four of the King's Enemies like shish kebabs upon his gleaming blade. Turning calmly, he watched Pathos and Bartholomeo wrestle the fleshy English arch-villain, Leat Half-Nelson, to the floor, and subdue him.

"Well done, rare comrade," he shouted. "France is saved! Let us go to my aunt's nearby castle, for rest and Schafer beer."

"Let us retire to the antechambers," his rapt friends huzzaed. "Schafer's got a smooth round taste—never sharp, never flat."

The gay blades were taking their ease in the great banquet hall when Skip the Page entered, carrying gleaming silver tankards and a single bottle of Schafer.

"Hallo! Just one for all!" expostulated Bartho incredulously.

"No, all for one!" exclaimed the greedy Pathos, snatching up the beer.

"En garde, Pathos!" murmured Altos, buckling his sword and reaching for his foil.

"En garde, Pathos!" echoed the noble Bartho.

"Save your steel for the Cardinal's Guards, gentlemen," smiled a youth from the doorway, "and answer this riddle: What's o'yang hear in the best of circles?"

"Schafer all around!" chorused the impetuous trio. "What is your name, O insolence?" asked Altos, advancing on him.

"D. R. Tagon," the youth responded proudly, throwing open his cloak and revealing the six-pack of Schafer he carried. "I crave lad!" vociferated the adventurous threesome. "Welcome to our company!"

• The Old Order Changeth

Nothing is quite as sobering as the realization that you belong to an era that has passed, that a career is coming to an end. The September day, four years ago, when we first climbed the now-familiar stairs of the Franklin Society Building to the offices of The Daily Pennsylvanian, seems like only last week.

We had ideas; we were going to reform the world. We had no patience with the staid, conservative people we found, and no change was too sweeping to institute immediately. Suddenly we are the old order and new challenges are being pressed, going beyond those which we can envision.

Our successors have already shown the bold imagination which can further advance the paper to new heights of excellence and acceptance. They have proven themselves to us, and we are sure that they will now do the same to you.

To the new editors, we extend the legacy of our experience and the collected knowledge of 74 years of Pennsylvanians who have devoted themselves to The Daily Pennsylvanian. We wish them the strength to stand for their convictions against adversity, the wisdom to serve intelligently and wisely and the good fortune to see the paper flourish under their leadership. And we hope that they will be able to look back at this same time next year and honestly say that they are satisfied, for that is the greatest gift of all.
Nine Openers Delayed; Begin Season On First

by Harvey Stan

The scheduled opener between the University of Pennsylvania baseball team and the Temple nine for next Thursday, during the Spring intramural league, has been delayed for May 12. The opener for the Quakers will be on Wednesday, April Fool's Day against Rutgers of South Jersey, according to coach Jack McKeough. Larry Wenz or Gary Ward will hurl the opener for the Quakers against the Trenton school.

The Quakers' diamond, meanwhile, is to be ready in a week's time for the first time ever, thanks to the change in schedule. The delay of the opening of Penn's 1955 varsity baseball season will help the squad, as a heavy April record playing in 40-degree weather.

The practice held yesterday, under assistant coach "Doc" Graham, stressed hitting as each Quaker diamond-hitter was looked over with a microscope by the batting coach. The hurdles put up during the first two hour practice session, Graham told his nine, will be used in the games as coach Jack McKeough was unable to attend.

With the loss of two long-ball hitters in Steve Schuck and Rich Kravitz, the underclassman Al Delacruz and third-baseman Bill Reams are now expected to trouble in the runs batted in department.

If the Quaker fielding can hold up during the first seven games, all of which start this week, with Chuck Kaner, the returning alf to the all-BIG, team last year as an anchor, the outlook for the season will look very good. The catcher is a valuable find of last year, in which the Quakers won their first game in seven years with the high talent of 1954 committed 31 errors.

The team is ready for this season and Bob Green, the second baseman, and Blue fail to get without one error and against West Chester STC the Quakers showed no trouble.

At first base for the Red and Blue in the opener against the MicaNhnik Switches To Foil As Duellers Enter NCAA Play

The Red and Blue varsity duellers will compete in the NCAA A.A. A. baseball championship series, beginning April 20, on Thursday. The game will be held on the campus of the University of Pennsylvania and will be broadcast on WRTI, the campus radio station.

The duellers, Bob Shippy and John Howard, will be facing the MicaNhnik Switches, who have won the last five meetings between the two teams. Shippy, who has a .325 batting average, will be up against the MicaNhnik's pitcher, who has a 1.83 earned run average.

If the MicaNhnik Switches win, they will advance to the NCAA A.A. A. championship final, which will be held on the campus of the University of Pennsylvania. The Red and Blue varsity duellers will then face the winner of the championship final, who will have the top seed in the NCAA A.A. A. championship.

The Red and Blue varsity duellers will be playing in front of a capacity crowd, which is expected to number around 8,000. The game will be broadcast on WRTI, the campus radio station, and will also be televised on WRTI-TV, the campus television station.
