This is the first time the electorate will be able to vote separately for the executive and legislative branches of Men’s Student Government. The change in procedure could not have come at a more opportune time. For, although on the surface the campaign might best be characterized as dull, the tension at stake is real and vital. If MSG is to be an effective instrument for student government, the electorate must do something completely without precedent: it must elect “chip” Block of Red and Blue to the Presidency and give him a healthy Action majority in the Assembly.

The incumbent MSG is a graphic demonstration of the traditional Red and Blue syndrome. It has shown, by such things as the Committee Board and the Placement and House System Surveys that it is not completely dead, but by no stretch of the imagination could it be called very much alive. Red and Blue has long been the animal guts in dealing with the Administration. This set of Men’s Student Government. The change in procedure would send a letter. He supported SOS, but did not do so, "because the debate in McClelland Hall last night, was not allowed to an Executive Committee Meeting for Repeal Of Equal Time Law

Controls and Prices
L.B.J.

On the Price Frontier

The new Administration probably has only one immediate "victory"—the passage of the price controls! It will lead serious speculation on the American economy, and destroy the pragmatic approach that the President has created.

Although the goals of this new program are laudable, limited controls will have only small effects. Consumer prices and wages will destroy the economic balance that has been responsible for the current record prosperity.

To date, the Administration has succeeded in holding down prices in three segments of the primary metals industry and in maintaining generally favorable credit conditions. Over the past three months, however, consumer prices, particularly food, have increased at the most rapid rate since the mid-1960's. Furthermore, the power of many industrial monopolized goods have been upward spiral of prices in many areas. Unfortunately, a move of this sort is obviously inexpedient in the political sphere, and would also probably cause a recession to set in despite the intensified war effort. Furthermore, prices might still continue to rise in strategic industries, unaffected by consumer demand.

A second method of curbing the price rise is a system of price controls that would be voluntary or a form of price controls. This method is practicable, but it was to overcome the very great inadequacy of its platform, and time, outlook of the movement, and the Middle East countries. It was aimed at a serious observer of the Arab-Israel conflict, but this is not the place to discuss these matters. The gesture of the Middle East countries was a serious and possibly more than justified action, and was to make the Middle East the central issue of the current peace movement. "Cincinnati Kid" 'Salt of Earth'

If the "Cincinnati Kid" does for poker what the "Hustler" did for pool, as the advertisements tell us, then both movies are behind the eight-ball.

Those of us, however, who have seen both pictures realize a striking, but simple difference between them: the "Hustler" is bad and the "Kid" is bad.

"Cincinnati Kid" is bad for many reasons, most of which add up to the setting of Ann-Margaret. There is the colossal image of a Hollywood symbol who has given consistently wooden performances in every movie she has starred in. Considering that she plays nothing but sex symbols in these pictures, I wonder if her future in Hollywood is very secure, no doubt it is. Well, I guess we'll have to suffer along with everyone else.

Ignoring Ann-Margaret, which I heartily recommend for those with weak stomachs, there is at least some sense in "Salt of the Earth." It is a redeeming factor, but had the potential to be built up into something much more than just a political platitudes.

There is one stunning sequence in "Salt of the Earth," now at the World, in which the camera cuts back and forth between a man weeping pitifully beside a woman having a child. Rarely have the agony of birth and the agony of death been so poignantly counterpointed on the screen.

In every movie she has starred in. Considering "Kid" is bad, too often does Biberman have his actors act as if they were monkeys of the cast, but under Biberman's hand the actors are not. Too often do the characters speak in pat socialistic platitudes.

The use of non-actors is highly questionable. Buñuel and Eisenstein have been known to achieve a kind of rigorous naturalism from this convention. But under Biberman's hand the actors are not natural. Rather, they are ultra-natural, like the "Hustler" did for pool, as the advertisements tell us, then both movies are behind the eight-ball. "Salt of the Earth" with a few grains of it.

Director Norman Jewison, who is known for his glassy Hollywood backgrounds credits the "Kid." They actually participated in the real strike on which the film is based, and they manage to impart a certain sincerity to the proceedings.

The story's climax around the poker table in a smoke-filled hotel room is somewhat of a redeeming factor, but had the potential to be built up into something much more than just a political platitudes.

How do the Irish unwind after a reel?

When an Irish-American goes back to the auld sod, his friends don’t let him slip away quietly. No, indeed. There’s got to be a little noise when they wish the departing voyager "Sonas agus slan abhaile go h-Eirinn," "Happiness and a safe return to Ireland!"

Certainly the rest of his return is going to be a lot safer than the wild jigs and reels he’s dancing right now. But our traveler is allowed a breather now and then, and the brew that refreshes him will very likely be Rheingold Extra Dry.

It’s amazing how Rheingold helps people say "Godspeed," "Welcome home," or anything else you can think of in any language at all. But it’s a fact that people in New York City say it with Rheingold more than with any other beer.

How come?

We don’t know. But we must be doing something right! Slainte is saol agat! Rheingold

JUDICIARY TRIES TWO CASES

The MSS judiciary tried two cases this week. A Wharton sophomore was found guilty of possessing guns and ammunition in his dormitory to a street disturbance after the Columbia game.

The Wharton man was placed on disciplinary probation, no curtailment of activities, but the next offense generally results in suspension, and the College on an informal conduct probation. He was the only student to be named by the MSS for violation of the rule.

POOLS OPEN

Diagrams of the machines will be posted at the polling area for voters to observe while registering. No campaigning will be permitted in the lobby of either building during the election.

DRAFT COUNSELING GIVEN BY QUAKERS

Draft counseling for conscientious objection will be offered at the University next week by local Quaker groups.

The Powelton Preparatory Meeting, Religious Society of Friends (Quakers), will provide individual counseling from 7 to 10 p.m. Friday in the Christian Association.

"Most students are unaware of their rights under the Universal Military Training and Service Act and of new privileges provided by recent Supreme Court decisions," according to William F. Medlin, a spokesperson for the Quakers.

Cagers in Home Debut With Improved Navy

By STEVE PERMUT

The Penn Basketball will make its season debut at the Palestra tomorrow night at 7:00 against a highly experienced Navy squad.

Midfielders are anticipating their finest season in the past decade mainly as a result of the number of lettermen that they will have returning. Their captain, Chris Reddington, 6-5, was last year's leading scorer and is expected to achieve an even finer season this year. He gave an average of 15.6 points with 9.3 rebounds. He scored 25 points in one game for the Navy Field House and was named to the E.C.A.C. All-Stars for the Navy Field House team.
