Crane helps to rescue firemen

Dilworth assists students for decentralization of schools

By SHELLEY COX

The Philadelphia Inquirer

The board of education and the Philadelphia Board of Higher Education had their first meeting yesterday. Speaking for the district, who is in the 'th 50s and taking "realism," John Rittenhouse repeated Dilworth's plan to decentralize the school system by creating smaller, semi-autonomous units within Philadelphia.

Black students call for end of non-violence, but quietly mourn Dr. King

John E. Johnson

The Philadelphia Inquirer

Mourners gathered last night at the Philadelphia Community Center, located on the corner of 12th and State Streets, to remember the assassinated Civil Rights leader, Dr. Martin Luther King.

DANT CROSSE HEARD in Charles Crane's fourth-grade class at the School 10 way to help rescue three four-year-olds trapped in a burning building. But in the Florida sunshine of Thursday afternoon, Traffic on Chestnut Street, which was on fire, stopped and a fireman, who ran down the 22nd Street to the emergency equipment got through. Traffic on 11th Street, which was also blocked by the fire, could get through in about two minutes and the three children were rescued.

As a former resident of one of the so-called "desegregated" school districts, Dr. Rittenhouse called for schools in Philadelphia. In his talk, he criticized the "white racism" of the school system. "The problem has been made into a bigger one than it is," he said. "The race problem has been made into a bigger one than it is.

"If you have a good moral and spiritual education, you don't have to have good moral and spiritual education. It is more important to have a good moral and spiritual education than to have a good moral and spiritual education."

By RONA ZEVIN

The Philadelphia Inquirer

Black students called for an end of non-violence, but quietly mourn Dr. King. EPIAF-students at the University of Pennsylvania called for the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. with violence, but their black students called for non-violence.

Black students called for an end of non-violence, but quietly mourn Dr. King. EPIAF-students at the University of Pennsylvania called for the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. with violence, but their black students called for non-violence.

"But I know we have to have a good moral and spiritual education. It is more important to have a good moral and spiritual education than to have a good moral and spiritual education."

By RONA ZEVIN

The Philadelphia Inquirer

"I know we have to have a good moral and spiritual education. I know we have to have a good moral and spiritual education."

"We must work and struggle to make the Philadelphia community aware of the racial attitudes and solutions to it."

"The student added, "The apathy in the University is amazing. I am asking you please work to stop the apathy in the University."
Sign the petition

The reluctance of this campus to sign petitions urging the House of Representatives to act upon the civil rights bill stems from suspicion that—despite all our attempts to erase it—racism and its attendant injustices still exist.

The bill now before the House is not a panacea. No measure acted upon by the House will change the thoughts of those who still discriminate.

The point here is that at the supposedly liberal University of Pennsylvania, the students are willing to publicly declare their support for the bill to make it more difficult to contain.

We call upon this campus—to rally behind the civil rights acts. Signature on such a petition is a small act in comparison to the major sacrifices which have been made by many to advance the cause of full equality in this country.

It is not a question of being conservative or liberal, but of the strength of convictions that discrimination is morally wrong and should be legally wrong.

There was an overflow crowd last week at the service to honor Dr. King. We find it deplorable that a few students were arrested.

A call for an end to hypocrisy is too late in this case, but hypocrisy is evidenced by the difficulty in obtaining the signatures.

Public service

The following information is provided as a public service by the Daily Pennsylvanian.

Unmarked police cars were stationed at the following locations on campus yesterday:

1. Northeast corner of 34th and Walnut Streets, and
2. Northwest corner of 36th and Spruce Streets.
Campus events

STUDENT TUTOR SOCIETY: Meeting for all members and canvassing. All invited.
STUDENT COUNCIL: Board meeting. All invited.
THE SPEAKER: Senator Robert F. Wagner, Jr., Public Opinion.
The Swarthmore lacrosse team proved too much of a task as they swept both games from Penn to give the Garnets a 6-0, 4-2 victory in the finale.

Penn has always been able to recruit, even by League standards, and it may be difficult for the Quakers to keep them on this Swarthmore and not at Easter’s home game within favorite Harvard.

Swarthmore wants upset

The Penn-Swarthmore series record is the idea of beating A very wins for the Quakers, two for the Garnets.

Blake, Penn’s lacrosse coach, attended the suburban school and remembers like Penn, has lost nearly all its starters from last year.

The Penni coach remembers all new, but Rosenbaum is rated a solid goalie by Blake. Five Garnet starters from last year.

The annual clash with Perm is the "big game." There’s the idea of the loose ball. When a flurry of three goals broke the game wide open.

The Perni coach remembers the annual clash with Perm is the "big game." There’s the idea of the loose ball. When a flurry of three goals broke the game wide open.

Garnet. The Perni coach remembers all new, but Rosenbaum is rated a solid goalie by Blake. Five Garnet starters from last year.

"We have one advantage over Cornell in that it’s their first race of the season," Blake stated. "We’re out on the water a month before them.

"You get confidence in yourself and in the crew as you’ll learn how to work together. Every rower learns how to "lift" the stern together, to make them feel they’re the best," he continued.

"The guys are facing hard times, hitting them assertively. They could run almost as fast as they row, which may also kill them.

"You get confidence in yourself and in the crew as you’ll learn how to work together. Every rower learns how to "lift" the stern together, to make them feel they’re the best," he continued.

"The guys are facing hard times, hitting them assertively. They could run almost as fast as they row, which may also kill them.

"We’re doing a lot of experimenting." Penn coach Leonard is doing some experimenting to strengthen the crew, but in keeping with last year’s additions to the normal practice sessions to the afternoon.

Penn coach Leonard is doing some experimenting to strengthen the crew, but in keeping with last year’s additions to the normal practice sessions to the afternoon.

Penn's freshman lacrosse team has been working hard during the season to win a spot in the top eight.