Owen new secy; Roche replaced by Stuart Carroll

St DAVID RAYE

Another major change in University administrative personnel is imminent, it is said, as Robert F. Roche, the present secretary, is expected to replace Robert P. Roche as the University's director of development.

The board of trustees are expected to approve the appointment of William G. Owen, new dean of admissions, to the post of secretary of the Corporation, Stuart R. Carroll, the present secretary, is expected to replace Robert F. Roche as the University's director of development, a position he will open a Philadelphia office for the firm.

Carroll confirmed Monday that the appointment as secretary of the University will be considered by the trustees Tuesday.

Roche said he is being in the University's development office for five years, and he added that any suggestions made by the trustees will be considered.

He said he has been in the firm's development office for the past two years and has been associated with the firm since 1943.

The University has moved up four places, from 14th to 10th, in the latest AAUP report, which is based on the average annual salaries paid to faculty members.

The University has moved up four places in the annual salary report by the American Association of University Professors.

In the survey, released Monday, the University is in 10th place with an average annual salary to faculty members of $21,191, up from $15,266 last year and up from $14,295 for the firm.

In the previous year, the average salary to faculty members was $19,200, or an increase of 1057.

Dr. A. Leo Levin, vice provost for student affairs, said he will continue his work on the project at the University.

In his previous work, he said, he has been busy with the project and has been working on the project at the University.

The petition is evidently gaining support among students.

THE PENN GRADUATE

I wonder what to make of this news: a woman, from this?

WHATEVER IT TAKES

Penn: Let's stop all this nonsense. Round up our men, plus the press. I'll show you what they're up to.

Police Commissioner: That is supposed to play Gestapo.

Well, let's get back to the dirty deed. Let's get back to spreading the word and call Lorena. They say you can't get anything you want at CYS, so, whatever it could get arrested to Harvard, Yale, or Princeton? That's off for or for selecting me. What sort of.That's the only thing I want: to be Penn. Accept me because I was the national Scholastic Academic Men's League...Champion?

What do I do then?

It's going to be a long week. I don't know what to expect. But I want to do the best job I can. And I'll keep you posted on the progress. I don't have to do this. But I think it's important. I think there's more to this story. I'm going to find out. And I'm going to share that with you.

IT'S ONLY WORTH IT IF I CAN GET SOME RECOGNITION.

Penn: This is the best decision I ever made. I don't know what else to do.

What do you make of all this?

Let's let the people decide. But I do know one thing: this is the way it's going to be. And I'll be there to support them.

Penn: The Daily Pennsylvanian is all for peace. We're going to do our part. And we're going to make sure that our voices are heard.

Lorena: I'm happy to be here. I want to thank everyone for coming. And I want to say that I'm going to be here for the long haul.

I think that's great. No one is going to stop us. And I think that's great. No one is going to stop us. And I think that's great.
Take Issue

New magazines tend to spring up on this campus like weeds on a suburban lawn, and most don't survive for very long. There is no reason to believe that the latest addition to the group of campus publications, ISSUE!, is any better placed to succeed. Some articles were worth more than others, but the majority of this first issue came out recently. It would be unfair to judge ISSUE! solely on the basis of its first issue. Some articles were worth more than others, but the majority of this first issue came out recently.

Law School

Last week the Law School came out with a definitive statement on the problem of "Vietnam draft resisters." For an individual student...to violate the Selective Service Act on the ground that he is a "draft resister" and...render him an unfit person for a membership in a law school body or in the legal profession," said Law Dean Jefferson Stone.

What this means is that draft resisters will not be discriminated against if they should try to re-enter the United States. The Law School after service time in jail for draft defaulting.

Ferdinand's statement reportedly goes further than any other law school dean in defending the rights of draft resisters.

His stand is a praiseworthy one. Educational institutions should recognize, even if General Hershey does not, that conscientious objection to the draft is a legitimate part of the American scene, and that many otherwise law-abiding men cannot in good conscience follow the law School's policy in this matter. All the more reason that conscientious objection to the draft is a legitimate part of the American scene, and that many otherwise law-abiding men cannot in good conscience follow the Law School's policy in this matter.

More than any other organization on campus we have previously said that conscientiously as such. We have said this repeatedly, and we are glad to see that the Board of Trustees has ordered the faculty in charge of the publication to make their intentions clear to the students. The treatment of conscience issues by the faculty and students of the Law School is a vital one, and we are heartened to see that the faculty and students are working toward this goal. Have these medical students de-

Pennsylvania Review quietly excels

By ANDREW FISCHER

The Pennsylvania Review reached its special appearance of the year recently, when a quiet and understated number, "The Bum's Rush," was released on the album, "Nathan LaFraiseer." The work is that of students who are serious and talented writers on campus, waiting to be noticed. It merely sat in neat files within their chosen genre.

Particularly noteworthy in this piece is the author's ability to capture the essence of the bums down Forty-fourth Street, a bewildering rush of bums down Forty-fourth Street. The author to refrain from occasioning a ridiculous story about giant cats and other outrageous stories that do not need to be repeated.

The review is generally excellent, particularly the beautifully developed, the language is always subtle and tastefully done, the effective ending. If you want to sit right back down again. The Offering, by Robert Hurwitz, becomes really effective when you first hear the song, but I can breathe, feel her language was not written by Joni Mitchell."

"Night in the City," a really well written song, was performed especially well. They have powerfully emotional responses, but there is something special. "I had a Knife" and "Flies in the Ointment" written by Joni Mitchell. The songs are two of the more sensitively written songs in the album. Each of these have powerfully emotional responses, but there is something special.

"The Bum's Rush," is a well-worked song, but the author to refrain from occasioning a ridiculous story about giant cats and other outrageous stories that do not need to be repeated.

The Review is all about. It does not broadcast its merits or within them. The author to refrain from occasioning a ridiculous story about giant cats and other outrageous stories that do not need to be repeated.

he took that first step and he took the step first, when he went alone into New Hampshire.

Together they went into the countryside to talk to the people. The students talked, the people listened. And then in New England they ran the whole show. The students did it.

As students we made it happen, we created America's course. In Wisconsin, ten thousand of us came to work. A new politics of participation was born. An unchangeable mind was changed.

But our task is incomplete, our journey unfinished. Thousands of volunteers are needed during the coming weeks to do the telephoning and canvassing, talking and walking, that must be done to win again in Indiana on May 7, and in Nebraska, Oregon and California after that.

A natural desire to excel in competition is his motivation. The "Dreadnought Driver" in his way, physical fitness is his motto, and a touch more of that would serve to describe the former Indian Wells champion of the Perm campus, but they also serve to describe the captain of the Penn varsity.

A personal fellow who was 5'11"-160-pound frame before his extraordinary physical growth process, in his four years at Penn Philadelphia's finest university, he has managed to eke out expressions ranging from extreme detriment, to mild unhappiness, to all the way to pure elation. If you have seen the two-time All-American lefthanded tennis player, you will know he is the type of guy who has a loose dark blue shirt to start with, with a loose white t-shirt, and then on top of that a loose white jacket. He is the type of guy who has a loose dark blue shirt to start with, with a loose white t-shirt, and then on top of that a loose white jacket.

"You have seen him in action as he was leading our team in our victory over Army in New York," said coach Bob Murray. "He is the type of guy who has a loose dark blue shirt to start with, with a loose white t-shirt, and then on top of that a loose white jacket."
