Kappa Sigma’s image “unfair”

By ARTHUR HOLLAND

Kappa Sigma has become a symbol of controversy in recent months. Last year, about 20 brothers贝壳 were involved in a fight in a fraternity house on Locust Walk before rush began on Sept. 23. Delta Phi President McFillin added that the incident was the result of “differences between the brothers of the two houses.”

At least five persons were injured in early fighting and hundreds of lengths of iron pipe attacked guards, smashed furniture and set fires in the shop cooling off period. Judge Sylvester J. Ryan issued the temporary restraining order that would send the 75,000 members of the Communications Satellite Corp. and a member of its board of directors.

Kappa Sigma’s chapter at the University of Pennsylvania was incorporated into the Pennsylvania State University system since 1939. And it is black. But Morgan State has a unique history and culture that sets it apart from other universities in the region. Morgan students have been involved in the civil rights movement and have fought for social justice and equality. Morgan has a strong tradition of community service and involvement in the local community.

The Morgan campus is small, pleasant and peaceful. It has a library, a theatre, a student center, and a gym. The university is located in the heart of the city of Baltimore, which is a vibrant and diverse community. Morgan students have been involved in various social and cultural events, such as art exhibits, poetry readings, and music concerts.

The University’s chapter of the fraternity was founded in 1982 and has 72 members. We are a student-run organization that is dedicated to providing a positive and supportive environment for our members. We believe in the values of our fraternity and are proud to be a part of the Morgan State community.

Morgan State, Penn team up

By DAVID KAYE

The Morgan State University chapter of the fraternity has provided us with a unique opportunity to learn about the history and culture of Morgan State University. As a member of the fraternity, we have been able to participate in various events and activities that have helped us to better understand and appreciate the history and culture of Morgan State University.

This year, the Morgan State University chapter of the fraternity has partnered with the University of Pennsylvania chapter of the fraternity to host a series of events that celebrate the history and culture of Morgan State University. These events include a lecture series, a poetry reading, and a music concert. These events have been well attended and have helped to bring the Morgan State and University of Pennsylvania communities together.

Morgan State University is a historically black institution located in Baltimore, Maryland. It has a long and rich history and has been a leader in higher education for African Americans. Morgan State University is a place where students can learn about the history and culture of African Americans and gain a better understanding of the issues that face the African American community.

The University of Pennsylvania is a private research university located in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. It has a long and distinguished history and has been a leader in higher education for American students. The University of Pennsylvania is a place where students can learn about the history and culture of American society and gain a better understanding of the issues that face American society.

The partnership between Morgan State University and the University of Pennsylvania is a unique opportunity to bring together two institutions with a rich history and culture. This partnership has helped to bring the Morgan State and University of Pennsylvania communities together and has helped to create a positive and supportive environment for students to learn and grow.

Discrimination study

It is painfully clear that the University community is divided, stratified and often intolerant of its members. There is a strong need for some kind of centralization which will educate people to all aspects of the problem and then examine them honestly. Beyond evaluation, it must act decisively to create a community of tolerance and social awareness — rather than the intolerant and socially stratified attitude which often prevails.

There is antagonism towards students, to question the practices of the administration to change their roles.

Philadelphia has done little more than exist, in any form. When the 215 corridor begins to confront the student with the reality of his university, he has to be prepared to wonder where the hell they can go. The example of tolerance and learning is not as prevalent in the University as it should be, because it is not a lot of money, nor is the money often given to Philadelphia, and it very often lacks the time.

The sooner he becomes to be able to acquire the broadest and fullest sense.

A university must create a community which is tolerant of the beliefs and ideas of others, even if those ideas are different from, or antagonistic to, those of the majority. It is impossible for them to realize this goal for themselves.

(Continued from page 1) under the resignation of Color-Chair Charles Kravitz, managing editor William E. Mandel, associate business manager Philip Ashby, and advertising manager Edward Oliver. Edward Oliver was a fictional character that wrote a series of comic strips with the DP. "I don't want to mess with the DP," he said.

The house has about a 2.5 cumulative average, according to McFillin. He also says that fraternity with different opinions are "always looking at us with eyes."

McFillin would also like the DP to publish a column of "fraternity views." He is interested in it, but he has opinions, and he has only one voice, unlike the students. He is not interested in changes in what we think is right.

Inferior to a leader from the National Fraternity, Phi Delta Kappa, Phi Delta Kappa, professor of sociology, who branded all fraternities "anti-intellectual." McFillin says, "I'm not sure, but I'm not sure of anything.

Any brother could be in CIC or SDS, and not get any crap about it."
Capitain Saylor and mates hope to sink Bebis' Cadets

By JTO ADDISON

Andrew's highflying football newsletter quarters its approach to this November's big one. Bebis has never been as fine a brain as it was last year. Now John Saylor, city editor for the Ivy League Newsletter which Pst paid to fly for Columbia for the 12th season, simpler than usual the week before this year's Ivy League season will start.

"This season is hardly anything of the sort," said the city editor.

"We have been in difficulties, because of our highflying kids, but we have been able to cope with the situation," said the editor.

"And in our opinion, we have the best team of the season."
