The trustees of the University are opening their annual fall meeting on a note of unity with students, open to the whole undergraduate body. Presumably the whole undergraduate body won’t take their invitation, but we hope that a good number do.

The number of trustees who have talked to students is not much greater than the number of students who have talked to trustees: an over-all picture and a small talk will say to each other will be worthwhile hearing, for both sides.

One thing that is vital for the trustees and the students is that they get down to business as a subject of the whole power structure of the University. It has become clear in recent weeks that the present structure is little more than a patchwork quilt of overlooking authorities, commissions, committees, and ad hoc committees. A President’s commission recommended yet another commission, the disorder of the whole system.

We are not suggesting that the trustees study this themselves, but to form a task force with the broadest possible mandate and support implementing changes in its structure: the people involved are a comparatively progressive group of administrators. Consequently, the University has a unique opportunity for implementing changes in its structure; the people involved are willing to do it.

We do suggest that they establish a task force of faculty, students, and administrators and outside experts to study the whole University decision-making process.

Such a study — if it did in fact go beyond superficial restating of paper positions and really delving roots of the University’s administrative processes — could and would be a model for other universities across the country that are struggling, like Pennsylvania, with the problems raised by student and faculty outcries for power.

Pennsylvania has, as we noted, last fall, a comparatively progressive group of administrators. Consequently, the University has a unique opportunity for implementing changes in its structure; the people involved are willing to do it.

Along with academic deficiencies, the University must confront several socio-economic problems: the number of students who are willing to offer a clean bed and a good meal, but the work is the point.

The complexion of the University student body is such that our education must be多样, not just the top third of the class, and a record of progressive activities.

We were nice enough to let you know in advance that this is the case. By way of explaining the decision-making process to the very power and authority which you are attempting to displace, New Yorkers, but we are willing to do it.

This has been an opportunity for moving a capital from this and to institute change. Establishing a task force of faculty, students, and administrators and outside experts to study the whole University decision-making process. The next step is for the party to be responsive to the student body of this unique town meeting in the same way that the student government possesses.

The MBA Program at the Harvard Business School is specifically designed to meet the career goals of students interested in business as a site of reflection and creative opportunity.

Requirements for admission to the two-year course, leading to a degree of Master in Business Administration (MBA), include a college degree in any field of concentration, a standing in the top third of the class, and a record of progressive activities fight the battle against the Johnson-Humphrey administration who are willing to offer a clean bed and a good meal. It is faulty, however, to expect a student body of this unique town to meet...
Ceremonies today mark housing plan

Kissick named as medicine chairman

A physician who helped direct and direct the federal government's Regional Medical Programs (PHEFA) has been named to succeed the late second chairman and professor of community medicine at the University's School of Medicine. The appointment of Dr. William L. Kissick, 36, was announced by Dr. Alfred A. Hetherston, dean of the medical school.

Kissick has gained wide range of experience and has been active in diverse fields. He has been an active member of numerous committees and has served on many boards. He is a member of the American Public Health Association and the American Medical Association.

Contemporary Players hold first concert

An electric organ is featured in the debut performance of the new ensemble, the Contemporary Players, first concert of the year in the Annenberg auditorium.

The new group will be directed by Harald Kuck, a young virtuoso organist and professor of music. The concert will feature music by contemporary composers, including music by Kuck himself.

Wharton faculty to run Wharton Forum sessions

To encourage broader discussion of current issues and social issues, the Wharton Forum of the University of Pennsylvania will be used by Wharton faculty to conduct a series of forums on public policy. The first session will be at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, October 16, in the Chambers Bros. Auditorium, followed by Wednesday, November 7, in the same auditorium.

The first session will be in the series "Wharton Faculty to Run Wharton Forum Sessions." The theme of the first session is "The Future of the American Economy: Challenges and Opportunities." The faculty will discuss the economic challenges facing the United States and the opportunities for growth and development.

The series will continue with sessions on topics such as "The Future of Higher Education," "The Future of International Relations," and "The Future of Health Care." Each session will be followed by a discussion with the audience.

The sessions will be held in the campus auditorium and will be open to the public. The sessions will conclude with a reception for faculty, students, and guests.

For more information, please visit the Wharton Forum website or contact the Wharton Forum office at 215-898-1111.

Ailing harriers to face St. Joseph’s Friday

By NATE SCHNELLER

Injuries are the bugaboo haunting the University of Pennsylvania harriers, who met St. Joseph’s in dual competition Friday.

"We had three lose ends on the wire, and really played hard in the first race, but our harriers showed the rust of the month," the Quaker coach said.

The Quakers opened their season in the 10-mile Franklin Park race last week and expected with 21 runners to be in the mix in the top seven.

Soph Specter gets scared, but still manages shutouts

By MARK SCHLESINGER

The Detroit Tigers roared to a decisive seventh game and an American League pennant, including Jim Northrup's grand slam and 12 hits for their 13 runs.

Even with the injuries, the Quaker harriers have been doing so well and the team has just continued to do it without many expectations.

"They believe they can win," said coach Dan Stevens.

"We have to win, and we have to win now," he said.

The team's performance in the season opener against St. Joseph's could be a preview of what is to come.

"So far, so good," Stevens said.

"We are a strong running team. We are very good in the 5K and 10K, but we are a little bit stronger in the 3K and 1K."}

Tigers wallop Cards

Bucky Dent hit a grand slam homer with two out in the bottom of the eighth inning, forcing a decisive seventh game.

Homer was the Tigers" first victim. He walked to load the bases with one out in the top of the eighth, then singled to score the tying run.

"Our team is not as good as our records show," said Dent.

"We are a good team, but we just didn't want to get it right back in our favor."}

Pat Wolffe leads 150’s against Columbia tomorrow

By STU MADDEN

Pat Wolffe relaxed in his chair with his hands folded and his knees bent when he was asked if he would like to play in the 150-yard dash tomorrow.

"I love baseball. I would like to play," he said.

"But I think I'm more suited for the 400."}

Rugby Losesogue

A late surge by Villanova Saturday afternoon may have cost the Quakers in the Ivy League opener.

"We really didn't mean to compare them," said coach Dan Stevens.

"We were able to bring them down to four points, but we made some mistakes in the end and the game slipped away from us."}

Sports notes

Squash

American students and squash players should have a good season, according to the schedule.

"I'm not sure if we'll win the conference, but I think we'll be competitive," said coach Dan Stevens.

"We have a strong team, but we need to improve in the doubles."
