HUMPHREY BEGINS FINAL CAMPAIGN WEEK IN PHILADELPHIA

[Text continues with various local news stories]

NATIONAL

The Presidential aspirant pointed out that the peace movement is not a "core group" that will be "destroyed" if it doesn't succeed. He and two other students, one from Michigan and one from Minnesota, are heading a group that will be "very successful" if the mass demonstrations succeed.

During the last term of Congress S. H. Ratner, W. J. Young and J. L. N. Gunther, who represents the University group, will present a resolution of constitutional amendments. Miss Garzon is coordinating a national effort to implement the idea. "I think it's important that we know the different committees. One group will address the issue of the state legislature, another of the national legislature, and a third of the national congress."

National primary pushed at Penn

By STEPHEN HARMON

If a group of University students are to play a major role in the national primary system, the system's implementation will be replaced by a national primary.

Five undergraduates are heading a drive to have Penn become a participating state in the three-day national primary campaign. They are members of the University group of the Citizens for a National Primary-CNPs.

The campaign will be coordinated with the national primary system, as well as the national and state education systems.

Richard Barnett, a sophomore in electrical engineering, said he is "very optimistic" that the campaign will be successful.

Dick Gregory did not try to "buy and sell" his image. "I'm not interested in the business of politics," he said. "I want to be a part of the movement towards a more just and equitable society."

The action is a number of the most prominent of Students for Democratic Society.

The resolution of the Board of Trustees meeting seems to have reached some sort of conclusion. If our young trustees are to do a good job, it must be done in consultation with the University for a number of reasons.

The University’s connection with the Vietnamese war, exemplified by the acceptance of Viet Cong refugees and its past and present classified research programs, is one of the “national security” reasons. Other benefits of domestic blacks from both sides under the University’s administration, and certainly based in the eyes of its neighbors, is the necessity of this University to be accessible to the Board of Trustees.

It is therefore shocking that this institution should be run by a group that is not driven by the same kind of standards that we so closely follow in whether or not we are right. It is painful to watch the Board driven by bureaucratic superiors with its students. And it is ridiculous that the Board of Trustees have the right to impose any kind of rule or regulation on students that they do not themselves agree with.

The actions of the Board of Trustees at this meeting were not taken in the best interests of the students. They were taken in the interests of the institution itself, and the students of this University are not the only ones who will be affected by it.

There’s a service right here on the Penn campus that can help you do just that.

We call it our Insurance Counseling Service. And it’s designed to help you solve your insurance problems in any or all of the following areas: automobile, homeowners, marine, personal catastrophe or professional liability needs.

We study your present insurance policies in terms of today’s standard of living and determine if you have adequate coverage.

Through a plan such as this, we can then offer faculty and staff members complete coverage at attractive low rates. This plan is underwritten by Pacific Employers Insurance Company, a subsidiary of the Insurance Company of North America.

A convenient, salary-deduction payment plan is available that lets you save because no interest or carrying charges are added to your premium.

We offer the opportunity to share in cash dividends. Dividends declared are based upon the combined experience of those participating in the program. For example, just last March, our automobile policyholders received dividends in the amount of 14.7% of their annual premium.

proposals to get the necessary bills to Mansfield, will create enough support that the idea will be seriously considered. Extension of the system cited are: Extension of the system search into the history of the national senators from that state, as well as organized national support mobilized. The dark-haired Wharton student from page 1 has "actively come out for the national primary system over the last hundred and fifty.

Some people just keep on missing Good, responsible people who buy without sufficient planning—who simply aren't aware of all that life insurance can accomplish for them. These men know how wasteful hit-or-miss buying can be. Call one of them. They'll find him an expert in his field. Ask him about "Provident's Personal Planning Service." It takes just 5 minutes to explain. But what a lot of money it's worth!

Quakers’ Burrell voted ECAC ’Back of Week’

Senior George Burrell was the recipient of the ECAC “Back of the Week” award for his performance against Princeton Saturday. Burrell is the first goalie for the Quakers to win the honor.

The Scarlet Knights jumped to an early lead against Columbia in the first half, scoring three goals in the initial 15 minutes. The Knights went on to win the game, 9-5, with strong offensive play from the likes of Giffin and Martin. The Quakers’ defense was efficient, holding the Tigers to just five goals.
