Wilson calls for violent revolution

By DON SHOLL

Black people are oppressed — not just white people, and the only way black people can free themselves is to free themselves. If we don’t do it ourselves, it will be done for us.

The problem, Wilson said, is a "supermarket" which "mutilates" everything and everyone. Black Power means a "supermarket" where black capitalism, and now Black Power to transform society.

Wilson emphasized that whites do not really have power because they do not have control over the process. The problem, he said, is a "screwed up" or "corrupted" structure of the country. People are afraid of everything, and the problem is in the society.

Wilson defended the idea of a revolution that will take place February 18 in Houston Hall, any member of the University will leave March 9 and return March 14. To be eligible for the drawing, which will be held at Houston Hall, any member of the University must leave between March 9 and March 14.

The committee, which includes two members of the Board of Trustees, has already met several times to discuss the objectives of a student committee to plan menus, will be discussed again Thursday.

The current question of Anti-Semitism is merely a "supermarket" for violent revolution, said Wilson. "There is a cultural structure" of the country, he said.

The Houston Hall food crisis calls attention once again to the stomach-turning food served to a captive freshman in Houston, Texas, showing how the educational process in major universities is systematically designed to stifle student participation.

The food served at Houston Hall is a depressing sight, as evidenced by the declining enrollment and attendance rates. Students report that the food is unappetizing and often unsafe, leading to a decrease in the quality of life for freshmen.

Additionally, the cost of food at Houston Hall is alarmingly high, adding to the financial burden on students. This issue is compounded by the lack of variety in the menu, which fails to cater to the diverse dietary needs of the student body.

The lack of communication between the University administration and the student body has further exacerbated the situation. Students have reported feeling unheard and ignored by the University's decision-makers.

In conclusion, the food crisis at Houston Hall is a symptom of a larger problem within the University's administrative structure, which fails to address the fundamental needs and rights of its students. The University must take immediate action to improve the quality of food served to students and ensure their well-being.

SEX EXPERT HEADS MARriage Council

Dr. Harold I. Lief has been named director of the Marriage Council of the University of Pennsylvania, effective Sunday, July 1. He will assume the directorship of the Marriage Council in addition to his responsibilities as professor of psychiatry and director of Family Study, University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine. Marriage Council is affiliated with the Division of Family Study.

A widely known psychiatrist and authority on marital and sex education, Lief came here to head the Division of Family Study in 1968 from Tulane University School of Medicine. He will assume the directorship of Marriage Council when he also heads a new Center for the Study of Marriage, created by the University in 1969.

A graduate of the University of Michigan, Lief received his degree of Doctor of Medicine from New York University. He did post-graduate study in psychology at Long Island University, School of Medicine and also trained at the University of Minnesota for Training and Research.

Lief is a charter Fellow and Executive Past President of the American Academy of Psychiatrists. Professor of Social Sciences at Tulane University, 1962-1968, he is author of many publications in the fields of psychiatry and sex education for physicians.

President of the Council, the Rev. Dr. James R. McCullin, III, said that under Dr. Lef's direction "we expect to see an expansion of marriage counseling services to the community as well as an increase in training of students and residents in marriage and sex counseling."

The services of Marriage Council are available to students at the University, "although we see as often as we would like, simply because they don't know about it." Those who disregard the services of Council are more often graduate and medical students, not married, than single.

"Pre-marital counseling available for couples who are mentally and emotionally prepared to marry. Group therapy and family life education programs are also offered."

Lief has participated in advisory and service planning programs for councils on campus both last year and this. Like the major issue the Council would like to increase the amount of pre-marital and marital services to the community. "We hope to do more with the service in the future."

Marriage Council charges for its services, but fees are based on the economic status of the clients. Fees are available to students at the University. "Students do come," Lief said, "although not as often as we would like, simply because they don't know about it." LUV seeks youth vote
By Collegiate Press Service
Another campaign has been launched in Los Angeles.

The source of the new movement, called the "Youth Movement," is said to be a group of young people from the University of California at Los Angeles who are allegedly involved in illegal activities.

The student government development vice president, who was not named, said that the group was formed to "create a new and different approach to student government." The group aims to "empower youth and promote a sense of community." The campaign is expected to be a major issue in the upcoming student elections.

The campaign will focus on issues such as education, the environment, and social justice. The group is expected to work closely with other campus organizations to achieve their goals.

The campaign is expected to be a major factor in the upcoming student elections, and it will be interesting to see how it evolves.

Can S.I. Hayakawa preserve American higher education?
By Collegiate Press Service

Samuel Inaba Hayakawa is being held up as the savior of American higher education as we know it. However, his policy has already been tested by the student movements at San Francisco State, and he must prove his worth before he is considered a true leader.

The student movement at San Francisco State was one of the largest and most successful in the country. It culminated in the famous "March on the Pentagon," which brought national attention to the issue of the Vietnam War.

Hayakawa's response to the student movement was to call for a "return to the classroom." He stated that the students were "ignorant and unprepared," and that their protest was a "waste of time and money."

This response was met with widespread criticism, both on the left and the right. The left argued that Hayakawa was not addressing the root causes of the student movement, while the right accused him of being soft on communism.

The student movement was eventually crushed by a combination of police brutality and student apathy. However, its legacy lives on in the form of student activism and the importance of academic freedom.

In spite of his failure to preserve American higher education, Hayakawa remains a force to be reckoned with. His on-going battle with the student movement will continue to shape the future of American higher education.
THE UNIVERSITY FORUM
FRESHMAN YEAR STUDY

The University Forum wishes to investigate experiences of undergraduates in their freshman year at the University, with the intention of making constructive recommendations of specific ways in which the freshman experience can be improved. In a word, the Forum wants to "personalize" this university. Here is your chance to communicate with those who can present findings and conclusions to those who ultimately have the power and the authority to make changes. You are asked to respond to any or all of the areas of concern and file your reactions and suggestions with Dr. Roland Frye and Joseph Cooper, care of the Office of the Vice-Provost for Student Affairs. All students, regardless of sex, year, academic standing, or school are invited to respond. In responding, consider your own experience as a freshman and also representative experiences of other freshman. "Gripes" may be in order, and positive suggestions for improvement certainly will be. Please remember that when the Forum begins to consider this matter, specific criticisms and recommendations will be more helpful than blanket condemnations and endorsements. Your assistance will be much appreciated in this attempt to make Pennsylvania an even greater University.

Tigers pose threat to grapplers’ skein

Philadelphia's Penn, masters of the mat, have a chance this afternoon for something more than bragging rights. The Quakers open the Ivy League season today against Princeton. The match is tied for second in the league, only as a coach, but as an admini- ster, I care less about myself and the future of the program than anything else.
