HOUSTON HALL BOARD REFUSE TO ALLOW WOMEN TO HEAL

The Houston Hall Board of Directors has refused to allow women to heal.

The board's decision was made after receiving a petition from the Houston Hall

Women's Association, which sought to establish a women's healing center in the hall.

The board's decision was based on the belief that women's healing centers are not consistent with the values and traditions of Houston Hall.

College faculty opens 402nd meeting

By MARK SCHLIESCHER

The students of the College for Women, was said Tuesday that she would not be permitted to heal on Houston Hall Board (HBB) solely because of her sex. Albert Rosenhaus, chairman of HBB, gave as his reason the fact that Senator Unick found, the female constituent to 1969, could not afford a lost of interest in student and campus administration. He said it was not good now, but that the committee should sell as much of the bond market as possible.

The committee, which also sponsored Tuesday's meeting of the Faculty Senate, was com-

CRITICISM of a campus newspaper, to paraphrase H. Rap Brown, is as American as apple pie. As an officially sponsored and controversial newspaper, The Daily Pennsylvanian has been the target for a large mass of criticism, from police disputation to threats of physical violence.

As the year has progressed, letters to the editor have accused the DP of being unrepresentative of the student body, of representing the interests of a Jewish conspiracy, of being too loud, too critical and too controversial. The DP has been accused of not being "representative of the student body" or "responsible." Tonight at 8, in the Fine Arts Building Auditorium, the entire Senior Board of The Daily Pennsylvanian will meet with its critics in a long-awaited dialogue which would air the differences between the paper and its critics, and perhaps iron them out.

Our problem was this: since we felt it unethical to respond to letters to the editor, how could we engage the campus community in a face-to-face dialogue which would air the differences between the paper and its critics, and perhaps iron them out?

The open forum idea presented itself, and has been adopted. Tonight at 8, in the Fine Arts Building Auditorium, the entire Senior Board of The Daily Pennsylvanian will meet with any interested member of the student body or faculty who has been accused of being unrepresentative of the student body or has been accused of publishing "irresponsible" material. There is also a threat — lodged with vice provost Russell — to beat up the Senior Board if the administration did not turn it in as a threat, so vocal in the past.

Regardless of what the Senior Board thinks, we do hope you will be there. Meet the press, and don't let us — or anyone else — be left in the dark about the issues at hand. Thanks.

Fraternity statistics released

By DAVID BRUSCEK

Martin Duffy, assistant director of ROTC data, released Wednesday that 510 out of 1,324 freshmen signed fraternities this year, or 63 percent of all freshmen. This figure, in absolute terms, is the greatest number of freshmen to pledge since 1947 when 1,016 freshmen—20 percent—were initiated. Percentage-wise, there was a slight increase from last year.

Throughout the world, the statistics have changed around 50 percent. The number of men pledging has been between 300 and 500 for the last four years. Duffy suggested that this usage represents the number of pledges constituting a university's ROTC, campus recruiting, and, therefore, a key variable in determining how many freshmen are registering.

He considered the consistent participation rate a possible indication that diversity strength and not decline despite some anti-fraternity sentiment on and campuses from The Daily Pennsylvanian. Duffy said that if the possibility that "freshmen might have been less selective," could be attributed to the ability of freshmen to maintain their numbers.

My son the hijacker

Michael Pappano, a 35-year-old chemical engineering student trying to antigol Monti to be his son, "I never would have confirmed," his father, Ed Pappano, assistant ROTC data, replied, "I'm sure he's interested in his hair long and coming home from time to time to work for the working." Charles Pappano said, "I am. Look, Mike, this is another, either have big or move.

The youth chose to move out and follow the change. His wife, the other part of the plane, also was happy.

The plane crashed just as the other day, they were all gone.

Sex barred from want ads

Robert Stokes, president of Sigma Sigma, said that in his own houses were fewer demands than before during formal rush of the fraternity. Most of the houses opened their doors to women after 10 years. The other century, the men and women lived together in the same house, and only one of them was selected for the fraternity. The change, says, "is the right thing to do."

The film is Mailer's attempt to express himself in a new context. His choice of subject matter, Umansky explained, was "the people who responded to the call for help from the United States." The film's director, Steve Schlesinger, said he was "a little bit daunted" by the task of turning a book into a film. "I'm not a writer," he admitted, "and I'm not sure how to handle that." But he was determined to tell the story in a way that would be both entertaining and educational. The film was shot in the fall of 1967, and it was released in February 1969. It is shot in black and white, and it is about 80 minutes long. The film was distributed by the National Film Board of Canada, and it was shown in 15 cities in the United States. The film was well received by critics, and it was shown at the Sundance Film Festival in 1969. It was also shown at the Toronto International Film Festival in 1969, and it was shown at the New York Film Festival in 1969. The film was released on VHS in 1979, and it was released on DVD in 1999. The high crime rate in West Philadelphia is a problem that is being addressed by the police department. The department is working with the community to try to reduce the crime rate. Also mentioned was a turkey farm near Valley Forge, "that an alumnus, Prof. Frank Miller, who graduated from the Wharton School in 1927, is the trustee who has supervised the farm." The price had gone up to $47.00. The land would be sold at an average price of $47.00 per acre. "Practically everything is at a loss," Butcher remarked. "I also wanted to check on my own education. I asked Friend, if he still was going to the meeting. There were over $10,000 at this meeting. There were over $10,000 at this meeting. Morris and Memorial dorm projects to begin new search for residents

By JONATHAN TALMADGE

Morris Hall and Memorial House, the two experimental coeducational dormitories on campus, are planning a new search for residents for the school year 1969-70. At the Academic Senate meeting last Tuesday, a faculty committee on residence, formerly headed by Dr. Van Harvey, professor of religious thought, and answer session. Dr. Van Harvey, assistant professor of political science, reiterated his support for lower student involvement on campus and a more student-centered education. He suggested that the academic spirit formulated during the freshman year should be retained.

The criteria for granting tenure will be rigorously evaluated by the faculty committee on residence. The committee will consider the contributions of the prospective residents and the needs of the current residents. The criteria will include the ability of the prospective resident to work effectively with other residents and the compatibility of their personal and academic goals with the goals of the residence hall.

The committee will examine the following areas:

1. The applicant's academic performance and potential for future academic excellence.
2. The applicant's personal qualities and leadership abilities.
3. The applicant's commitment to the development of a diverse and inclusive community.
4. The applicant's potential for making a significant contribution to the campus community.

You're treated like a professional right from the start!

"The attitude here is, if you're good enough to be hired, you're good enough to be turned loose on a project," says Don Feistamel.

Don earned a B.S.E.E. in 1965. Today, he's an Associate Engineer in systems design and evaluation at IBM. Most of his work consists of determining modifications needed to make complex data processing systems fit the specialized requirements of IBM customers.

Depending on the size of the project, Don works individually or in a small team. He's now working with three other engineers on part of an air traffic control system that will process radar information by computer. Says Don: "There are only general guidelines. The assignment is simply to come up with the optimum system."

Set your own pace

Recently he wrote a simulation program that enables an IBM computer to predict the performance of a data processing system that will track satellites. He handled that project himself. "Nobody stands over my shoulder," Don says. "I pretty much set my own pace."

Don's informal working environment is typical of Engineering and Science at IBM. No matter how large the project, we break it down into units small enough to be handled by one person or a few people.

Don sees a lot of possibilities for the future. He says, "My job requires that I keep up to date with all the latest IBM equipment and systems programs. With that broad an outlook, I can move into almost any technical area at IBM—development, manufacturing, product test, space and defense projects, programming or marketing."
