Rittenhouse quits as band director

By HVWELL KAMIS

E. Dennis Rittenhouse, assistant director of band activities, announced his resignation effective July 1, citing "irritating" pressures, "frustration," and lack of administration support as the main reasons for his decision.

"I feel that the last three years has been very demanding in terms of my energy and time," said Rittenhouse. "I have been very successful in my efforts to improve the band's performance and morale, but the support from the administration has been minimal." Rittenhouse added that he had requested several meetings with the administration to discuss his concerns, but was met with a "brushoff" and "disinterest." "I have been told that my contributions do not meet the standards of the administration," he said.

"I believe that the band deserves better leadership and direction," Rittenhouse concluded. "I have decided to pursue my career in music education and continue my passion for directing bands."
The fairer sex

It is unique in these liberal days to find a man who has enough courage to say he does not believe men and women are equal. For that reason—but for only that reason—we compliment Alex Rosenblat, a sophomore on the Houston Hall Board, and hope he is not strung up by a garter. But Rosenblat's statements, as reported in a page one article in Thursday's Daily Pennsylvanian, reflect an attitude which could not be defended in the first years of the century and certainly cannot be defended now.

Rosenblat says within two weeks the "cohesive spoke" which holds HHB together. It has been our experience that such an attitude change can by no means be defended in the first years of the century and certainly cannot be defended now. The problem of HHB is one of attitudes which could not be defended in the first years of the century and certainly cannot be defended now.

Rosenblat's statement is a call for change in the fundamental practice of an organization. The Daily Pennsylvanian, which opened its doors to women in 1969, is not such an organization. Student government, which incorporated the men's a women's governments two years ago, is no more cohesive.

The Daily Pennsylvanian welcomes changes in its own policies and that they would not be responsible in scheduling activities in the future. We need only point to Dorothy Senker, publisher of the New York Post (a paper which suffered at the hands of Women's Liberation and Advertising agencies in the 1960s,) and the recent economic upturn of the Daily Pennsylvanian.

But next Wednesday night, Jan Lieb, the sophomore in the College for Women who was turned away at the last HHB meeting, will be welcomed Miss Lieb into their healing program with open arms. We urge HHB to reconsider its policy and next week to welcome Miss Lieb into their healing program with open arms. We urge HHB to reconsider its policy and next week to welcome Miss Lieb into their healing program with open arms.

Who are they, "The Groupies"? The young girls with no last names. Sometimes in lonely pursuit, sometimes in packs, they follow the rock and roll stars from New York to Los Angeles, from ballroom to ballroom, from motel to motel. They are the unsung and unpaid camp followers of rock. Not to mention the male groupies on the scene. You won't believe some of the things that happen along the way.

In the new issue of Rolling Stone: a special supplement devoted to the wierd and sometimes tragic exploits of these beautiful and not-so-beautiful young girls. Like Fat Sammy who had to settle for the PR man when everyone else had taken the members of the Jimi Hendrix Experience, including the road manager and Jimi with three at once... but that's another story, and it's in the new issue of Rolling Stone.

Sometimes we call Rolling Stone a "rock and roll magazine," but it is a rock and roll magazine with a hell of a difference. Music is where we start, but we cover a new culture and a new life style which is taking over America.

Our abundant supplement on "The Groupies" is in its photography and startling in the bizarre but true stories, the tawdry tales and amazing anecdotes which dot the latent history of rock and roll. For instance, did you ever hear of a pair of Chicago chicks who call themselves "The Plaster Casters." They spend their evenings making plaster molds of the biggest names in the business. Plaster molds of what? You'll find out all about that one soon enough in a special photographic visit to their "studio" and from the pages of their diary, which they kindly let us have... but that's still another story, and it's in the new issue of Rolling Stone.

Rock and roll, but with a hell of a difference. Rock and roll, but in a way you've never read about it before. Rolling Stone is one of America's two incredible magazines. Get it now, before it is sold out again.

MBA Association forum debates need for University involvement

by DON SNELL

Wharton faculty members and community leaders met recently to discuss the need for the University board and administration to become more actively involved in the community. The forum was sponsored by the MBA Association and was attended by students from several MBA classes.

The forum began with an introduction by Dr. George Taylor, Harnwell professor of industry, who emphasized the importance of campus involvement in the community. He said, "In the future business will have the main problem of becoming involved in the community in which it finds itself, both as a loyal taxpayer and as a loyal citizen. We will not be able to remain aloof from the community and not be affected by its problems."

The forum progressed to a discussion of the need for the University to become more actively involved in the community. The participants agreed that the University has a responsibility to be involved in the community and that it should take an active role in addressing community problems.

One participant suggested that the University could become more involved by creating a community service program that would provide students with the opportunity to work on community projects. Another participant suggested that the University could become more involved by creating a community advisory board that would provide the University with the opportunity to become more involved in the community.

The forum concluded with a call for increased involvement by the University in the community. The participants agreed that the University has a responsibility to be involved in the community and that it should take an active role in addressing community problems.

Fencers nip N.Y.U.; face Navy Saturday

By STEVE FADE

The Fencing Squads maintained their unbeaten record at the hands of Princeton last Saturday. The Fencers scored 32-12 to move into a decisive 14-1 win over the visiting Princeton squad in an entertaining fencing meet.

The score is not truly indicative of the match, for a large number of the competitors were making their first appearance on the NYU bench. The match was split between five NYU fencers from both the foil and sabre divisions.

The disappointing highlights of the match were the absence of several key players, including NYU's Coney Baldwin. Brazilian-born Professor Renato Galle, who was scheduled to compete, was unable to make the trip due to illness.

The match opened with a convincing first set victory for the Fencers, 15-7, with Ira Breen leading the way with a 3-0 score. The second set was more competitive, with the Princetonneons taking the lead 9-7. However, NYU rallied in the third set, winning 15-10 to claim the match.

NYU's national champion in both foil and sabre, Paul Morrow, led the way in the second set, scoring a 4-0 victory. The third set was a more balanced affair, with NYU winning 15-10.

The NYU Fencers will face their next challenge on Saturday, when they host Army at Ringe Squash. The match is scheduled to begin at 10:00 a.m. with the Fencing meet. The NYU Fencers are currently ranked 14th in the nation, while Army is ranked 25th.
