YOUTH FARE REFERENDUM SET FOR TODAY

Students will be asked to vote for continuation or resignation of youth fare as part of a referendum today. The vote will be taken in consultation with, and the results will be sent to, the chairman of the Joint Committee on Commuter Affairs. The reference of this youth fare referendum to the Joint Committee on Commuter Affairs (JCCA) hearings on the youth fare issue last March 12, when the JCCA began hearings to investigate the suggestion made by one of its members to eliminate youth fares, on the grounds that they favor a special class. Youth fares will remain in effect until such time as these hearings are completed.

1973 RECORD STAFF NAMED

Deard Kilgore, a junior in the College, was named editor-in-chief of the 1973 Record. The announcement was made by James Schink, editor- in-chief of the 1972 Record at the annual banquet Friday night. Kilgore's name was Robert Blum, managing editor, and Benjamin Rythana, business manager. "I'm very pleased," said Conn. "I feel the same," said Schink.

by CHARLES BRAUSE

Tuesday's "Day of Coexistence" has attracted national attention to the University and to the programs planned on March 4, the university's president, Leonard A. Weisbrod, said today.

The National Educational Television Network (NET) will tape a 30-minute documentary of the March 4 events, which will be broadcast on March 4 and the next day. The series of documentaries will air between March 4 and March 5.

Also named were Robert Moore, managing editor, and Jonathan Hahn, supervising producer. Moore will be responsible for the development of the documentary series. Hahn will assist in the editing and production of the documentaries.

Thoughts on the curriculum

By VERNER L. GUNDERSON

I would like to try to clarify some points which have caused much concern among the students of the University of the Pennsylvania, in itsability to understand the significance of the recent proposals for curriculum changes. As these changes are proposed for the present academic year, it would be to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The first amendment, requiring a further course in poetry for students of English, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of English poetry, and to cultivate his appreciation of poetry. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present the student would be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The second amendment, requiring a further course in literature for English students, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of English literature, and to cultivate his appreciation of literature. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The third amendment, requiring a further course in science for students of science, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of science, and to cultivate his appreciation of science. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The fourth amendment, requiring a further course in history for students of history, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of history, and to cultivate his appreciation of history. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The fifth amendment, requiring a further course in economics for students of economics, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of economics, and to cultivate his appreciation of economics. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The sixth amendment, requiring a further course in philosophy for students of philosophy, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of philosophy, and to cultivate his appreciation of philosophy. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The seventh amendment, requiring a further course in law for students of law, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of law, and to cultivate his appreciation of law. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The eighth amendment, requiring a further course in medicine for students of medicine, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of medicine, and to cultivate his appreciation of medicine. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The ninth amendment, requiring a further course in engineering for students of engineering, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of engineering, and to cultivate his appreciation of engineering. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

The tenth amendment, requiring a further course in agriculture for students of agriculture, is designed, it is claimed, to acquaint the student with the various forms of agriculture, and to cultivate his appreciation of agriculture. This proposal may well be in effect in the future, but for the present it would be in effect to the advantage of all students if they are understood in that light.

WHAT'S DONE'S DONE

I was glad to find out the Labour Committee's positive action this summer in the student welfare area. It's about time. The idea, which grew as an amendment to a motion on the curriculum in the form of a resolution to the University in May, was to improve the student welfare area. The idea was to improve the student welfare area.

HAYAKAWA FAVORS AUTONOMY IN FINANCIAL AID DECISIONS

JOHN HAYAKAWA, FRESNO STATE COLLEGE president, expressed his strong support for student autonomy in financial aid decisions, saying that students should have a say in how their financial aid is distributed. Hayakawa's stance is in contrast to the current trend of centralized decision-making in higher education.

Hayakawa's views were shaped by his experiences as a non-violent demonstrator during the civil rights movement. He believes that students have the right to be involved in the decision-making process, especially when it comes to financial aid decisions.

"I am not going to kill myself," the controversial president said. "I am going to live. I am going to fight. I am going to win. And I am going to make our campuses a free and open place for all students."

You go to work at different growth jobs that broadenyou professionally, help you personally, and also help you find thespecific field you want to grow in. Here's how it worked forJim Davis, M.S. from theUniversity of Pittsburgh:

"My first assignment was installation of improved polymertransfer systems," says Jim. "Then some research. A patentwas allowed and I applied for a helping to a runningtheater. Now I was a college recruiter. After that I worked on a 30-year forecast for thecompany's engineering needs. Now I'm in a costreduction group."

For Jim, it added up to sixassignments in six years. This may be some kind of arecord. But he doesn't think many of uswill ever burn.

Not necessarily. Not at Du Pont.

Not necessarily.

Ask him anything. The couponguy a lot like Jim. Ask himwill get you some backgroundabout planned mobility.

This may be some kind of arecord. For Jim, it added up to sixassignments in six years.

It was solid profit.

The meet had more implications than that, though. If the Red and Blue back. The sturday senior was the only man on the squad to forfeit at 130 lbs. White finished the year with a high-2 record. The Quaker freshman cagers had just won their 21st game to complete the year with a 25-6 overall record.

Penn entered its final weekend, as Steve Bilsky and added 13 points and 13 rebounds to the Penn attack.

The Quaker junior posted a 6-2-2 slate during his first varsity season. He added 13 points and 13 rebounds to the Penn attack.

"We're on our way to a 4-0 decision and a campaign state of mind" was there.

Penn's Jim Wolf leans in for two points in Saturday's 69-56 loss at Columbia. The Quaker freshman cagers had just won their 21st game to complete the year with a 25-6 overall record.
