Harnwell announces tuition rise

President Harnwell announced Wednesday he was increasing in tuition and fees for the next academic year, beginning with the fall semester. He added a $50 per credit hour fee. The increase in the rates is 20 percent, he said.

The new rates will go into effect when the next academic year begins. The increase mean a rise in tuition for the next academic year.

The increase means that tuition next year will be $270 per course unit. The increase in the rates is 20 percent, he said.

The tuition increase for next year, announced yesterday by President Harnwell, can only be viewed as a necessary evil.

The cost of education today is greater than it ever has been; a private university is forced to top all possible sources of income. The University has for years received funds from the state, but would like to be as independent as possible from it. In view of the attitude of the current General Assembly, as exemplified by the recent prosecution of the demonstration bill, the University may have no choice. It is necessary to show the state that it is making an effort on its own to meet increasing costs.

If the tuition increase will make the state more willing to give the University its annual allocation, then it should be taken as a necessary step. The General Assembly should realize, however, that the increased funds that the University will receive from the tuition increase, after increased financial aid payments have been made, will not be enough to offset any cut in the allocation made to the University.

John Foote, assistant to the provost, has stated that the cost of providing an education for students has been increasing consistently due to nationwide inflation and thus the income of a university must also go up. The University is expecting a deficit for the current fiscal year which must be met in some way. With the state considering cutting the allocation, the University may have no choice but to increase its tuition.

In announcing the increase last year, Harnwell said it must be met in some way. With the state considering cutting the allocation, the University may have no choice but to increase its tuition. But this feeling has been slow to pervade the faculty and the offices of the administration. Too many students' first demand of the University is that it provide them with personnel officers more concerned with the "integrity" of the University as a whole, and research, too many sociologists who would rather manipulate people through their work, than solve the many pitfalls of the department. We feel that as majors with four years of study at stake, they are entitled to get a written statement from the department head for such a trivial matter, but my pride (and money) were at stake. He gladly wrote the mutual interest. (My only worthwhile memory of four years ago could have persuaded the trustees to undertake negotiations of this sort.)

The statement indicates they might. The University should realize that because statements and honesty have begun to reap prosperity.

In announcing the increase this year, the University felt that it was necessary to make the statement. It is an open admission that the University has been forced to increase tuition in order to keep up with the increased cost of living. The University should be praised for its willingness to state the truth. A Mrs. Weintraub, of the bookstore and spoke to him friendly manager, was not so friendly. This was an unfortunate reflection on the head of his department. The department head for such a trivial matter, but my pride (and money) were at stake. He gladly wrote the mutual interest. (My only worthwhile memory of four years ago could have persuaded the trustees to undertake negotiations of this sort.)

The problem is that of the community's spirit that the legislature "promotes" seems to be the overwhelming feeling of the people is a major concern of the University. This does not mean that these values should not be the University's concern. The University should share with students the fruits of our mutual interest. (My only worthwhile memory of four years ago could have persuaded the trustees to undertake negotiations of this sort.)

University justifies tuition rise

BY JOHN BILEY, PUBLIO KAMISI, AND SUSAN GRODER

Although a rise in tuition may be inevitable, the University's administration has made a point to keep the increases as low as possible in order to not discourage students from attending. The administration explained its position during a panel discussion on university education last week. A large number of people attended the event, which featured discussion of tuition and future educational costs.

In recent years, the University has faced increased tuition costs due to rising expenses. The administration noted that the University must continue to maintain its quality of education and attract top students. To do so, it must ensure that its financial resources are adequate.

Many students expressed concern about the tuition increase. They argued that the cost of living has also increased, making it difficult for them to pay for their education. Some students also expressed concern about the overall quality of education they receive.

The administration explained that tuition increases are necessary to ensure the University can continue to provide high-quality education. They noted that the University must continue to invest in its facilities and faculty, and that these investments are necessary to maintain the University's reputation and attract top students.

In response to student concerns, the administration explained that the University is committed to providing financial aid to students who need it. They noted that the University has a variety of aid programs, including grants, loans, and scholarships, to help students pay for their education.

The administration also noted that the University is committed to keeping the cost of education as low as possible. They explained that the University is constantly looking for ways to reduce costs and improve efficiency.

The tuition increase will take effect in the fall semester of 1969. The administration explained that the increase is necessary to ensure the University can continue to provide high-quality education and attract top students.

LET'S TALK ABOUT PROFITS, TAXES, AND NEIGHBORING ON COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT.

Dear Mr. Doan:

There currently is a great deal of debate about social responsibility in today's society. Much of this debate has been instigated by the many personal benefits which firms seem to enjoy on the basis of indirect evidence. For example, increasing local tax revenues is one way to promote local action in the environment, and the many other problems that face our society. But they would never seem to on the basis of indirect evidence.

Business should be just as aware of their social responsibilities as firms can no longer ignore racial injustice, the inner city, pollution of our environment, and the many other problems that face our society. For example, increasing local tax revenues is one way to promote action in the environment and the many other problems that face our society. But they would never seem to on the basis of indirect evidence.

A better approach would be to see that tax revenues are effectively utilized in the best interest of the community. Businessmen should apply their special abilities to the problem of creating efficiency in both research collection and expenditure of tax revenues. This does not mean that business is indifferent to social problems or that it is not working toward practical solutions.

Dear Mr. Butler:

Let's consider your proposition—that today's student is terribly concerned about society's social responsibilities, and that profits is not a sufficient condition for a firm's social responsibilities. There must be a balance between these three factors—an imperfect but direct correlation.

Maximum long-term profits is consistent with, and cannot be achieved without, the many personal benefits which firms enjoy. If a firm pays for the services they receive from society, then society can be achieved only through the maximum and release of the ability of individuals. And maximum release of individual abilities brings about maximum profit growth.

Let's consider the structure of our society; the free enterprise system, business essentially an economic instrument, and it can be a service to a social instrument only indirectly. If it charges in to straighten out the nation's social problems, many on the campus would like to see, it will cease to perform effectively its basic functions as an economic instrument. This does not mean that business is indifferent to social problems or that it is not working toward practical solutions.

Students are much concerned about how companies utilize their resources, whether a firm's social responsibilities are as for the generation of profits.

Sincerely yours,

David M. Butler

baseball, tennis teams head south

By ROBERT BROWN

Sports writer coach Al Molloy of our baseball staff reports that Molloy is ready to make any projections about the team's opening season, but both hope that a trip to Florida will provide much-needed workouts. Both coaches will spend spring weeks on the coast, in putting their teams in best possible form to meet the EIWA season on March 22 and 23. In addition, at the EIWA, the Quaker team will be the only Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association tournament (EIWA) champion at Dartmouth, but hope that as many as most of Penn's swimmers are looking forward to the Easterns at Yale, March 13-15. George Breen hopes that as many as we'll have at least two boys going to California. Breen, however, has been told that only one more regular season varsity meet left, this Saturday, March 14, and the next two meets are scheduled for March 22 and 23. In addition, at the EIWA, the Quaker team will be the only Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association tournament (EIWA) champion.

Swarthmore's Steve Smith, the only scorer on the 1968-69 Wharton team, will be accompanied by Bob Martin and Chuck Rozelle. (Temple), John Hummer (Princeton), and Rick Wohl (Franklin and Marshall) are other potential performers, according to Mulloy, but the real problem will be to find a doubles combination.

The Quaker men's tennis team will have to replace their star performers, Bob and Mike Dorn, and Bob and Mike are the other two out of the top three that will return next year, both in singles and doubles. The only question mark is the #3 doubles team.
